CARTER'S VIEWS ARE SHUNNED Federal Reserve Chairman Warns

OPPOSED BY BURNS

Against Tax Cutting and Other Suggestions as Inflationary

ECONOMIC ACTIVITY

By EILEEN SHANAHAN

Special to The New York Time WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 - Arthur F. Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve' Board, warned today against the possible inflationary consequences of trying to stimulate the economy through tax cuts, increases in Government speoding or a looser monetary policy.

These are the very policies that President-elect Jimmy Carter has said he would consider, in January, if the economic recovery still appeared to be slow.

In testimony before the Senate Banking Committee, Dr. Burns expressed his view that any stimulative steps would be unnecessary, as well as dangerous. That is because he believes that "all in all, it seems entirely reasonable to expect a pickup in the tempo of economic activity in the near future," without any soccial

'Course of Moderation'

For this reason, he said, the Federal Reserve would continue "to adhere to a course of moderation" io its actions that deal with regulating the supply of money that is available to fuel the nation's economy.

Dr. Burns's remarks did appear to be clear warning to Mr. Carter that the Federal Reserve would refuse to go along with, and might even act to counter Carter Administration policies, aimed at speeding the recovery from the recession.

The President-elect and the Federal Reserve chairman were not yet on a definite collision course, however, for at least two easons.

The first was that Mr. Carter has stated that he has not yet made up his mind that stimulative policies are needed. He

In Salisbury, Prime Minister Ian D. Smith rings in the 12th year of Rhodesian independence

Rhodesians Celebrate 11th Anniversary of Breakaway

By MICHAEL T. KAUFMAN Special to The New York Times

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Nov. 11-Just before midnight Prime Minister Ian D. Smith approached a polished brass bell at a tobacco auction hall here and solemnly rang in the 12th year of Rhodesian independence and defiance.

The bell, patterned after the American Liberty Bell, bore the inscription, "I toll for justice, civilization and Christianity."

As it pealed 12 times, the 750 people attending the independence ball stood still and quiet, the men io dinner clothes or regimental kilts, the women in lavish gowns. Mr. Smith raised a goblet of locally produced champagne, which if not a paean to the vintner's art is at least a credit to the ingenuity and adaptability of Rhodesia under sanctions.

"To Rhodesia," be proclaimed. The crowd, all white, all ardent supporters of Mr. Smith's ruling Rhodesian Front Party echoed, "To Rhodesia."

Before he rang the bell, Mr. Smith made a abort speech. He seid be was speaking in "a low key" because he did not want to make "any provocative statements" in view of the talks going on in Geneva. He asked for the crowd's understanding for npt being more passionate in his remarks.

"It is an understatement when I say there are a few dark clouds on the horizon," the Prime Minister declared. "But there are also some light patches of blue sky and we are charting our course in that direction." He urged, however, that Rhodesia not be blind "to the realities of the world."

"The code of moral standards is continually being eroded. We live in an era when the big lie is accepted more and more as a fact of life which the world learns to live with, as it bas accepted hijacking and terrorism."

Mr. Smith said it was regrettable that there seemed to be less resolve in "the free world than io the nonfree world." "The free world is constantly backing down before Communist aggressioo," he said. "Rhodesia is one of the few exceptions to the trend of compromiso

U.S. JOINS U.N. COUNCIL IN CRITICISM OF ISRAEL

A6

A Unanimous Statement Deplores Establishment of Settlements in Occupied Arab Territories

By PETER GROSE Special in The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 11-The Security Council today unanimously deplored the establishment of Israeli settlements in the occupied Arab territories, and declared "invalid" the absorption of eastern Jerusalem into Israel.

A consensus statement, in which the United States joined, was read to the Council after four days of public debate and long bours of intense private consultation to arrive at a compromise accept able to all its members.

The Israeli delegate, Chaim Herzog, promptly denounced the Council's action for showing "blased selectivity, one-sidedness and political expediency." Is-rael, though not a member of the Security Council, was permitted to participate in the debate, along with Egypt and other Arab countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Unlike in previous debates on Israeli occupation practices, when the United States opposed or avoided participation in the Council's majority statements, American diplomats said they had suc-ceeded in softening more extreme drafts sufficiently to join in the consensus with-out violating United States policy.

Israeli Diplomats Agree

Israeli diplomats agreed, saving that a stronger denunciation by the majority could have emerged if the United States had prevented a unanimous action.

The consensus statement, read by this month's Council president, Jorge Enrique Illueca of Panama, expressed "grave anxiety and concern over the present serious situation in the occupied Arab territories as a result of continued Israeli occupation." It called upon Israel "to insure the safety, welfare and security of the inhabi-tants of territories and to facilitate the return of those inhabitants who have fled the areos since the outbreak of hostili-ties" in 1967. These points broke no new policy grounds. Then the Council consensus asked Israel to "refrain from adopting any measure" that would violate International law. This marked a clear softening from the Coun-cil's statement of May 26, which the United States did not accept, calling on Israel to "refrain from and rescind" any such measure.

Measures Are 'Deplored'

Today's Council statement went on: "The measures taken by Israel in the oc-cupied Arab territories that alter their demographic composition or geographical demographic composition or geographical nature are deplored, and particularly the establishment of settlemeots. Such meas-ures, which have no legal validity and cannot prejudice the outcome of the search for the establishment of peace, constitute an obstacle to peace." Referring specifically to Jerusalem and its Arab sectors occupied in the 1967 war and subsequently annexed, the Council

Finally, the Council expressed its recognition that any act of profanation of the boly places, religious buildings and sites or any encouragement of, or conniv-ance at, any such act may seriously endanger international peace and securi-

American diplomats found particular significance in the careful phrasing of this last point, which did not single out Israel for criticism and applied to inter-ference in Jewish holy places as well as Christian and Moslem sites.

Moves by Russians and Libyans

During negotiations before adoption of this statement, the Soviet Union attempt-ed to call for an immediate end to the occupation—to which the United States objected—and Libya sought to call the entire occupation "illegal," which the United States also resisted.

American negotiators, however, were unsuccessful in their attempt to attach references to well-known Security Council resolutions calling on Arabs and Israelis to negotiate peace with secure and recognized borders for all states in the area. The present Security Council debate was the result of a complaint from Egypt thst many diplomats, including other Arabs, interpreted as an attempt to seize the initiative from other Arab govern-

Anticipating a critical Israeli reaction, American diplomats insisted that the consensus statement was "fully consistent" with previous Security Council resolu-tions in which the United States had joined

Speaking for Israel, Mr. Herzog said the United Nations was embarked upon a "modern international expression of anti-Semitism."

"No amount of threats, no amount of browbeating, no amount of biased and one-sided resolutions, no amount of anti-Semitic innuendos, will change our basic attitude or will influence us in any way." Mr. Herzog said. "We will not agree to any solution that is proposed here."

But fur Jacques-Yvan Murin, the 45 year-old leader of the Ouebec Party's parliamentry group, a victory would unt mean a sudden breakup of the Canadian Confederation by a declaration of independence by Quebec. In an interview, Mr. Morin, a scholarly looking international lawyer, said a declaration of independence might come some day but only after the Ouebec Party hed exhausted all means of friendly negotia tion and had received a clear mandate from the people of Quebec. Ha acknowl-edged that while the polls showed a lead for the Quebec Party, they showed un mandate at present for pulling Quebec out of Canada

The latest poll shows that among random telephane sampling af 1.597 per-sons throughout the province, 29.5 percent favor the Ouebec Party with only 15.9 percent for the Liberals and 8.4 per-cent for the once powerful National Union, a cunservative group. The key to the election appears to lie with a group of 30 percent that said it was still unde cided. Six percent refused to answer and the remainder were scattered among r parties.

But the same poll that showed a lead fur the Quebec Party also showed close to 58 percent against independence. This paradoxical result evolains the campaign strategy of the Ouebec Party, which Mr. Morin said consisted in attacking the Liberal Party's record in office rather than promoting independent

This prospect is believed to have been responsible for the drop in the Canadian dollar on the New York money market this week and for the wave of anxiety, approaching panic in some cases, that has swept the economically powerful English-speaking community of Montreal. But Mr. Morin made it plain that inde-

There is a prospect of repeated referendums if the first should fail to approve independence.

Mr. Morin was asked whether in an independent Quebec there would be a place for the English Canadians, some of whom talk of "packing our bags" in the event of a aeparatist victory Monday. So, the county went to President Ford, 2,365 votes, to 2,035 for Mr. Carter. The Georgian did get twice aa many votes as either George McGovern in 1972 or Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968. But Presi-dent Ford's clear majority here and throughout the Mountain and Plains states aurprised no one. Since last February, Yuma has been visited six times by The New York Times as part of a series on how different kinds of communities-rural, small city, suburban, inner-city-viewed the Presidential campaign.

Yuma is not necessarily a bellwether of towns in the 17 states west of the Missouri River that landed in President Ford's column, But Yuma's reactions to the campaign are instructive in analyzing the wave of Republicanism that swept four incumbent Western Democratic senators from office, returned several state legislatures to Republican hands and challenged pundits who once cited Colorado as a new beacon of progressive politics.

Embargo Narrowed Ford Margin

Neel Leathers, manager of the N and M Co-op Graio Elevator, a Democrat wbo voted for Mr. Carter, aummed up the traditional wisdom.

"My Dadoy always said, you could run a cur dog and as long as he was on the Republican ticket he'd win in this county," Mr. Leathers remarked while farmers weighed truckloads of corn keraels outside his office.

The Ford victory was narrow here be-cause, as Yumans repeated over and over again from the first primaries on, they were angry at the President's brief embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union in the summer of 1975.

Nevertheless there was another major issue that might have been the deciding one for a lot of western people-inflation. "Big spender" is synonymous with any Democratic candidate here. Yuma residents were ready to be convinced that Mr. Carter, despite his protestations of frugality, would eventually unmask him-self as a spender,

When Mr. Carter did start showing more of his regular Democratic colors in campaign appearances and especially in the debates, Yumans turned away from

As Patricia Schroeder, the Democratic

YUMA, Colo., Nov. 10-In the end, it Representative from Denver who won rewhelming margin, likes to say, "This is Mariboro Country." Many voters switched brands in 1974 out of disgust over the Watergate revelations. This time, many of them switched back.

Thus, all over Colorado, the Democrats were trounced. The lower house of the state legislature. Democratic for two years, jumped hack to a Republi-can majority. The State Senate became more Republican. A proposition to end the grocery sales tax in favor of greater mining taxes, which had the strong backing of Gov. Richard D. Lamm, a Democrat, was buried.

The fact is that conventional Democratic domestic concerns-jobs, unemployment, social welfare, race relations, housing, decaying cities-don't mean much out here. Colorado and sister states have swelled in the last five years, largely with white Midwesteroers fleeing those very problems. Sam Brown, Colorado's treasurer and a Democrat, described the state as "wonderfully and cussedly independent. Western, leave-me-alone independent." Utah, Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico ahowed similar conservative surges. One newspaper editor in boom-ing Wyoming summarized the extrabeavy conservative tilt by saying sim-ply, "The lunch pail is full."

Or, as J. A. Spiers of the Farmers State Bank in Yuma put it, "We're real-ly pretty comfortable with what we have and we're skeptical about what we might get with Carter." (Mr. Spiers himself, a Democrat, voted for the Georgian anyway.)

At the beginning, Mr. Carter's "Trust me" message appealed to Westerners, Yumana included. But he was never able to back it up with concrete pro-grams. Basically, he remained to them a stranger, an alien from a peculiar section of the country, with a funny accent whose soft lilt suggested to many Westerners that he was weak.

'Disillusioned' Republican

Dr. Richard Hemphill was Yuma's perfect man in the street. A thoughtful Republican shaken by Watergate, he had resolved to vote the man this time. not the party. A dentist, he liked Jimmy Carter's smile. But when he checked out the man's ideological teeth, he saw definite cavities.

The actual spread was three points. "I was never so disillusioned in my life," Dr. Hemphill sald yesterday, re-calling how favorably he had first reacted to the Georgian. of the Carter victory, said that it had been inevitable that Mr. Carter's massive

"He said he was going to do every-thing for everybody and at the same time cut taxes. He contradicted himself. His charisma wore thin. By electico night, I was on my knees praying for Ford." Some Yuma people are hopeful. Mcre are skeptical. When Betty Jo Wilson saw Mr. Carter break into tears the morning he returned tr Plains last week, she was moved.

"Maybe he won't be so bad after all," she told her boss. Roger Chance, the conservative publisher of the weekly Yuma Pioneer.

"Just what we need-a bawling President," snorted Mr. Chance.

Rangers Trade Beverley and Fairbairn To North Stars for Goldsworthy, a Wing

Within hours of his team's 7-5 loss to the Washington Capitals Wednesday night, an enraged John Ferguson, the New York Ranger general managercoach traded Bill Fairbairn and Nick Beverley to the Minnesota North Stars Goldsworthy. Ferguson an-the transaction yesterday for Bill nounced Goldsworthy, a 32-year-old right wing noted for his sharp elbows and contentiousness in the corners, had been with Minnesota for nine years and was the last remaining player from the original 1967 expansion team. He averaged 30 goals a season with Minnesota and holds every North Star career offensive record.

Fairbairn, a 29-year-old right wing, was in his eighth season with the Rangers. Beverley, a defenseman and also 29 years old, came to the Rangers three seasons ago from the Pittsburgh

"Joe Wood would have made it if his arm hadn't gooe on him at about 25 or 26. He was something. Wahoo Sam Crawford wrote me, saying how much he agreed with my opinion of Wood. Schalk said he thought Wood belonged in the Hall of Fame.

"Tommy Hoimes once remarked to me that the most un-recognized of the really great baseball players was Eddie Collins. He usually led his team in batting, and in at least 15 seasons when he played in more than 100 games he hatted over .300. He made more than 3,000 hits, had a 25-year average of about .333 and could do everything. Clarence Rowland said that besides being a star, Collins was a team player. His bonesty was a contribution to baseball that is unrecognized. They simply knew he was not for the fix in 1919.

"He was probably the player most disliked by the eight called Black Sox. There were stories that they wouldn't even throw the ball to him io practice, out I can't remember ever seeing that. He was the key player on two great teams, Athletics and White Sox.

"It seems Lefty O'Doul didn't have enough seasons as a hitter to qualify for Cooperstown-he started as a pitcher -bot it is an understatement to say be knew how to hit a haseball. Another who would have made it if his arm hadn't gone too soon was Jack Coombs. He could win more games than Eddie Plank or Chief Beoder until his arm went kerflooie. Nap Rucker is at least a borderlioe case. And Bobby Veach has been forgotten. Over 14 years he batted

"Addle Joss would bave gone down as one of the greatest of all pitchers if he hadn't died when he was reaching a peak. Joe Gordon ought to be at least a borderline case. Or do you think he belongs in the acrobats' Hall of Fame? [The Yankees' second haseman was proficient as a tumbler.] I would say the same for Larry Doyle and Jake Daubert.

"Clark Griffith thought Muddy Ruel ought to be in the Hall of Fame. I never saw Johnny Kling, bot he was supposed to have been something. And Jimmy Archer was anything hut negligible. You should have heard Casey Sten-gel talk about Archer and his squat throw. Ed Reulbach was a hell of a pitcher.

"If Heinie Zimmerman had played up to his great natural ability longer, he would be one. He was dropped out of haseball for association with gamblers, according to Tommy Holmes. Jimmy Dykes is as eligible as Rabbit Maranville. Bullet Joe Bush was as good as some pitchers who are in. Carl Mays was, too, but he was one of the meanest. Earl Averill thinks Luke Sewell belongs.

U.S. and Britain Divide Opening Cup Matches

LONDON, Nov. 11 (AP)-Chris Evert heat Virginia Wade, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 1hen Sue Barker rallied to defeat Rosie Casals, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2, tonight leaving the United States and British women's tennis teams tied at 1-1 after the two opening slogles in the Wightmao Cup competition.

Five more matches—three singles and two doubles—are scheduled in the series, which ends Saturday. The Americans are bidding to regain the cup after British victories the last two Vears.

Nervous tension played its part in tonight's action at the Crystal Palace sports center. Miss Barker was so jittery at the start of ber match that she won only 7 points in the first set, and Miss Casals appeared coasting to victory. But the 20-year-old British player then gained her confidence and sent a stream of forehands past her oppo-

Miss Evert galoed revenge for a loss to Miss Wade in the Dewar Cup final last Saturday. The first set was marked by dropped services. A total of six service games were lost. Miss Evert moved io froot by breaking Miss Wade in the second game. Miss Wade broke back twice, but Miss Evert won the set, 6-2. when she broke ber opponent in the eighth game.

Miss Evert concentrated on her rival's backhand, but in the secood set her plan backfired. The British player tightened her game and broke to love and then held her service for the first time in the match to lead, 2-0.

In the seventh game, it looked as if the No. I player on the American team might pull herself up. A forehand only ioches from the sideline, followed by a similar shot oo the backhand, brought her to 3-4 on her service. But Miss Evert then allowed the Briton to go up by 5-3 and bad her service broken for the third time in the set. Miss Evert was drawn out of position, hit wildly over the sideline and lost the set.

Amerrico Scores in Dash For First Stakes Victory

By MICHAEL STRAUSS

Marvin (Magoo) Marks was somewhat dubious about his 4-year-old colt's chances after saddling Amerrico before the start of yesterday'a $54,350 Sport Page Handicap at Aqueduct. "I hope that last race he won there nine days ago didn't take too much out of him," said the train-At the er. Amerrico, opposed by eight rivals, most of them with stakes-winning cre-dentials, proceeded to turn Race Tracks in one of the best efforts of his career. The speedy son of Dr. Fager took the lead rounding the turn and sped home a three-length victor over Pen-Y-Bryn a three-length victor over pen-y-Bryn Farm's Honorable Miss. The colt, guided by Sandy Hawley, who has been the oation's leading jockey, was clocked in a sparkling 1:094/5 for his six-furlong trip and returned $10.20 for $2 straight. The success was his first career stakes triumph

"This horse was easy to win with," said Hawley. "He was out of the gate with the leaders, dropped back slightly to third place shortly after the start and then took off by himself as we hit the turn.

Cojak Fedes in the Stretch

Once in command nearing the stretch, there was no catching Amerrico. Entremont's favored Cojak, who had been second for most of the jour-ney, dropped back in the race for the wire and finished fourth, 1% lengths behind Relent.

The only horse that seemed capable of offering Amerrico a challence once the leaders hit the stretch was Honora-ble Miss, the only female in the contest. The 6-year-old mare, who won five

Noe Returns to N.Y.R.A.

Kenneth Noe Jr., is rejoioing the New York Racing Association family. The former N.Y.R.A. racing secretary was named yesterday in fill the post of steward as well as the long-vacant job of director of Horsemen's relations. Noe returns to New York on Jan. 3. The aonouncement was made by Ogden Mills Pbipps, chairman of the N.Y.R.A.'s board of trustees.

"We feel Noe will strengthen the ros-ter of our officials right down the line," said Phipps. "Kenoy will bring his long experience into the stewards' stand. He also will give us a strong and uoder-standing voice in the complex world of our backstretch."

Noe is replacing Warreo Mebrtens, the former star jockey, as a steward. The appointment is subject to the approval of State Racing and Wagering Board

"There are other plans for Mehrtens," said Patrick W. Lyoch an association lice president." The N.Y.R.A. currently is developing a program in which Mr. Mehrtens will be involved."

Noe, 48, started in racing with his father, a former jockey turned trainer. He has run the gamut of track jobs--from- stablehand to steward. He has

At Roosevelt

There will be 12 starters in tooight's $25,000 second round of the $125,000 Silver Spoon Series. Seventeen horses were eligible, but recent strong show-ings by Governor Skipper and Jonquil Hanover caused the field to decrease. Governor Skipper broke the track's freshman pacing mark at Long Island track last Thursday with a clocking of 2:00 2/5. Since then, however, he has been plagued by an allergy rash. The pacer'a veterinarian has pre-scribed a bed of wood shavings instead of straw for the 2-year-old, hoping the chaoge will solve the problem. Another problem is that Governor Skipper is slated to leave from the No. 9 spot in the two-tier start.

At Meadowlands...

During the betting on Wednesday night's fifth race, the total handle since the harness track opened oo Sept. I reached the $100 million mark. Last Saturday, the Meadowlands welcomed its one millionth customer. The nightly average in attendance has been more than 17,500. Last week's turnouts were the most productive of all. In six nights, the track attracted its highest attendance — 110,834 — for an average of 18,472, and its highest total pari-mutuel handle — $10,958,821 — for an average of $1,826,470.

In bis Jim Freoch days, Presti was known as a wheeler-dealer, a salesman who enterteined lavishly and dispensed hottles of fine wine and other. gifts to prospective clieots. Many borsemen felt he wasn't doing anything that other borse traders hadn't dooe.

If all the slow-footed lemons sold by fashionable horse brokers were assembled in one troop, they probably could stock half the ridiog academies in America. And Presti has never been shy about promoting the value of his owo merchandise.

For example, he called Wine Treasure "a horse so good that my mother turned down an offer of $250,000 for bim last winter in Florida." Wine Treasure, a fashionably hred son of Never Bend, was purchased for $21,000 as a yearling at Keeceland. He has run well in his only three starts, all of them at Calder in Florida, and Presti says, "If he stays sound and they let him run, he'll wio the Derby."

At Keystone, oo the outskirts of Philadelphia, Don Krause of the T.R.P.B. said yesterday he had "no comment" to make about the case. Failure to Use Holtzman Still a Mystery to Hunter

Still a Mystery to filinter Catfisb Hunter was as surprised as many other baseball observers that Ken Holtzman was never used by the Yankees to pitch in the American League playoffs or the World Series, the Associated Press reported yester-day. Hunter, while signing autographs at a department store in Charlotte, NC., said be was mystified that Man-ager Billy Martin did not make use of Holtzman, a left-hander who compiled Roltzman, a left-hander who compiled a 4-1 won-lost record in World Series competition while playing for the Oakland A's.

"Nobody knows why," said Huoter. "Holtzman doesn't know why. He and I talked about it. I think it bothered him. He pitched us to the playoffs and the World Series and theo they acted like they never heard of him. We wondered why—he's 11-3 against Cln-cinnati lifetime."

Mineau, a 32-year-old jockey who usually races at Suffolk Downs in Boston and Rockingham Park in New Hampshire, found it a little strange to race clockwise io Kyoto. The slight hills on the course required extra thinking. He found the horses very quiot, not high-strung like the Amer-ican animals bred for speed. "Most of the races here." Mineau pointed out, "are run over a mile."

Government Runs All Tracks

Last year to Japan horse racing drew 39 million spectators, almost as many as attended bicycle races or motorboat races, on which fans may also bet. In 1975 the bettors wagered 1.5 trillion yen on horse races. That's $5.3 billion. There are 37 race tracks in Japan. all run by the government. "The racing

The Americans, whose crouching style with short stirrups greatly intrigues the Japanese, felt Japanese jockeys had a definite advantage in knowledge of local courses.

The horse assignment was by drawn lot.

"In Kyoto on Saturday," Aristooe said, "I should have won that one, I was coming down to the stretch, see, and all of a sudden there's oo more fence or hedge or nothing. There was room to drive 20 horses through. But we learned. We were ready the next day.

Americans Better in Final Drive

"The Japanese are good on strategy and good on letting a borse relax end get positioned," said Thomas, "uut when it comes down to the drive on home. American riders are much superior. It's a matter of style, that's all. Our bodies are lower and we're in

"The Japanese don't seem to keep together with the horse," added Aristooe, "they ride higher and their monkey style, bouncing up and down and all over, it has to hinder the horse."

Between race days the Americans, escorted by interpreters, have been kept busy sightseeing and visiting with many of Japan's 894 professional jock-eys. Thomas's wife Mary Ann even found time to buy a kimono. En route home, some of the jockeys will stop in Hawaii for a brief vacation.

weeks ago, inquiring about Falrbairn, Ferguson said. But the Ranger general manager wasn't sure he wanted to trade Fairbairn although he had benched the right wing at the start of the season, spoiling Fairbairn's "iron man" skein of 394 consecutive games.

"I played him after that just to make sure I wasn't making a mistake," said Ferguson. But when Fairbairn replaced Hickey for one shift against the Capi-tals and failed to check Lampman on the Washington player's first goal, Ferguson made his decision. Late Wednesday night he spoke with Gordoo and completed the deal.

Goldsworthy is earning more than $100,000 annually on a multiyear con-tract while Beverley's and Fairbairn's salaries combine to a total of approxi-mately $200,000 yearly. The players will report to their new clubs today. The exchange was Ferguson's second trade since taking over the Rangers on Jan. 7, 1976. In tha other, he sent Rick Middleton to Boston for Hodge.

Through single player deals, acquisitions and releases, Ferguson had shed some of the older Rangers such as Dunc Wilson, Doug Jarrett, Gilles Marotte and Bill Collins and gave the team a hopeful, young image by using recent draft choices in regular positions. "I feel we have enough youth in our lineup now," said Ferguson, "maybe too much."

Minnesota had been seeking a de-meman for the past few months, according to Ted Harris, the North Stars' coach. The North Stars have the league's worst defensive record, having allowed 70 goals in 16 games.

If you hurry, your Toyota dealer can show you why 76 Toyotas have been a bargain all year long. And when you look around and see what others are giving you at 77 prices ... a Toyota is even a better bargain now. But it's more than Toyota 76 prices that make them a better bargain.

The better bargain is quality. What good is a good price on a car whose durability is questionable? Toyotas are built tough with unitized welded construction to help eliminate squeaks and ratiles. And then each Toyota car is completely submerged in primer paint to protect against corrosion and rust. In fact, 9 out of 10 Toyota cars sold in this country are still on the road.

The better bargain is economy. Just as important as Toyoia's low purchase price is its total economy. Other cars may offer so called deals with huge savings. But those same cars may eventually eat up dollars with high operating costs or low resale value. The economy of operation of a Toyota can help keep your new car bargain a bargain. Check resale values at your Toyota dealer. You'll like what you see.

The better bargain is the top seller. Is a bargain getting some-thing off on a car nobody wants? Not likely. This year Toyota offered new car buyers a challenge. We said, "If you can find a better built small car than Toyota...buy it." This year, more people are buying '76 Toyotas than any other import car. You see, a real bargain is always a bargain.

Special to The New York Times

Two and a half months ago, Dave Gallagher vowed not to shave until the

This Suoday, the Giants play the Redskins again, hut win or lose, there won't be any wholesale hair raid. Some of the Washington Beards have grown accustomed to their faces. "I oever considered taking it off,"

Jack Gregory, the defensive captain who initiated the whisker rebellioo two weeks before the opener when the Giants were 0-0 and confident, said the black-bearded defensive end. "It's a nice feeling not to have to shave every morning."

Jets Are Favored Over Buccaneers; Giants Underdogs to Red

BY WILLIAM N. WALLACE

It's too bad Tampa Bay and the Giants, both without a victory, are not playing each other. At least one would go away happy. The Buccaneers will be at Shea Stadium on Sunday, with the Jets favored by a touchdown, while the Giants take on Washington at the Meadowiands. The About latter game is sold out and will be televised here (Chan-Pro Football oel 2, 1 P.M.). The second television game is Miami at Pittsburgh, Channel 4, 4 P.M. On Monday night Buffalo plays at Dallas, Chan-nel 7, 9 P.M. Previews of all games fol-low, with won-lost-tied records in parentheses.

LOCAL TEAMS

Washington (6-3-0) at Giants (0-9-0) Redskins, who have a good shot at the playoffs, are sticking with Joe Theismann at quarterback. He has more mobility than Bill Kilmer, and that's needed behind a wobbly offensive line. The only Giant among statistical lead-ers is the punter, Dave Jennings, second best in his conference. Betting choice: Washington by 7.

Tampa Bay (0-9-0) at Jets (2-7-0)-John McKay, the coach, says that if the Buccaneers had Ricky Bell, Southern California's star runner, this season they would have won four or five games by now. Whom is he kidding? Jets are playing these games purely for the edification of Richard Todd. Betting choice: Jets by 7.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

St. Louis (7-2-0) at Los Angeles (6-2-1)-"We've got to get more offense," said Chuck Knoz, the Rams' coach, and so he has switched quartercoach, and so he has switched quarter-backs, choosing Pat Haden, the Rhodes scholar, over James Harris. The Cardi-nals are facing a brutal scheduled with-out their big-play man. Mel Gray. This receiver will miss another game, havreceiver will miss another game, hav-ing had surgery to repair a broken nose. Betting choice: Los Angeles by 5. Green Bay (4-5-0) at Chicago (4-5-0) ---Walter Payton, the Bears' runner leading the league, needs only 101 more yards to reach 1,000. Packers' next four games are all against tha Bears or the Vikings, Coach Bart Starr says "Webya ext to win some of them says, "We've got to win some of them to show improvement." Betting choice:

to show improvement." Betting choice: Chicago by 9. Detroit (4-5-0) at New Orleans (2-7-0)—Lions like their new coach, Tommy Hudspeth, Many say he's the best they have played for. All of a sudden Greg Landry is leading the con-ference in passing statistics. Bobby Douglass, who did not play regularly for two years, has done creditably as Saints' quarterback. Betting choice: Detroit by 4.

San Francisco (6-3-0) at Atlanta (2-7-0)-Del Williams, the 49er running back beginning to make e name, will miss this game because of an eye injury: Tommy Nobis, who has been with the Falcons since their start in 1966, is miffed, and skipped practice for one day. He says some of his teammates are not trying and he may retire. Betting choice: San Francisco by 9.

Seattle (2-7-0) at Minnesota (7-1-1)-Seahawks believe they can set a record for victories by an expansion team in its first seasoo: four. But they are not counting on this one. Vikings are pushing Sammy White, receiver, as rookie of the year. Betting choice: Minnesota hy .20.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Miami (5-4-0) at Pittsburgh (5-4-0)— Steelers have played last 17 quarters without giving up a touchdown, last 13 without a point. How do you beat that? Dolphins' best chance would be for Bob Griese to throw 40 passes, which Don Shula would never allow. Betting choice: Pittshurgh by 10. Denver (5-4-0) at San Diego (4-5-0)-

Broocos woo the first game between these two, 26-0, and have improved, while the "new" Chargers look more and more like the old ones. They have lost three in a row with the defense crumbling. Betting choice: Denver by 4. New England (6-3-0) at Baltimore (8-1-0)—This is the biggest game for the Patrious in a decade. If they can win it they might make the playoffs, because the rest of the schedule is easy. A reason for the Colts' success is that the coach, Ted Marchibroda, makes no speeches. He studies film instead. Bet-speeches. He studies film instead. Bet-ting choice: Baltimore by 11. Houston (4-5-0) at Cincinnati (7-2-0) —Oilers have lost four in a row. Biame is focused on the easy ways of the coach, Bum Phillips, and disloyalty of the quarterback, Dan Pastorini. He's hurt, and John Hadi will start. Bengals don't gain a lot of yards, but they win the games. Betting choice: Cincinnati by 13. Kansas City (3-6-0) at Oakland by 13. Kansas City (3-6-0) at Oakland (3-1-0)—The Raiders' Cliff Branch is averaging 27 yards a pass catch, and nine of 31 have been good for touch-downs. The Chiefs' weak defense will need a net to cover him. Betting choice: Oakland by 14. INTERCONFERENCE Philadelphia (3-6-0) at Cleveland (5-4-0)—The Browns are in a quarter-hack turnoil and turn back to Brian Sipe, who bailed out last week's start-

Georgia Tech Board of Trustees handed Pepper Rodgers a new three-year contract today as head football coach in the wake of last Saturday's 23-14 upset of Notre Dame.

I'll shave the damn thing nif if we beat them."

Clyde Powers, the strong safety, looks good in his beard. "That's what the womeo keep telling me." he said. "But I'm getting a little tired of ft. "Stime to come off." "I'll bring the shaving cream," said "a h John McVay.

In practice this week, the Giants bave been pretty chipper for a team with an 0-9 woo-lost record and a startiog quarterback who is questiooable because of an elbow injury. The Redskins

"This is one of the top rivalries io professional football," McVay said, al-though since George Allen started coaching the Redskins, the rivalry has been one-sided (11 straght Washington vistoria including the Redskins and the started victories, iocluding the 19-17 decisioo in the opener.)

Giants Are Playing Relaxed

For the rematch Sunday at Giaots Stadium things are different. The Red-skins, with e 6-3 record, are still Natiooal Football League playoff contenders, but Joe Theismann, not Billy Kil-mer, is the starting quarterback. The Giants aren't as confident as they were before the first game and Norm Soead looks more and more like he'll be their starting quarterback as Craig Morton's elbow injury has shown little progress. But there has been an improvement in the team's morala lately, which coinin the team's morala latery, which con-cides with McVay's appointment as head coach replacing Bill Arnsparger two and a half weeks ago. "Coach McVay has taken the pres-sure off us," said Gregory. "We were afraid to make mistakes. Arnsparger had those yooog guys worried about mistakes. It was like a kid hreaking a glass. Now it's relaxed. McVay tells us to go out there and have some fun. This is a physical football team, so go out and play aggressively and if you make a mistake, don't worry about it." John Hicks doesn't agree entirely.

Giant Victory Over Redskins on Sunday Could Provide Hairless Results

'How the hell can it be relaxed down here when you're 0.9," said the starting right guard. But he agreed that McVay's accent oo physical agreesiveness paid off in last Sunday's 9-3 loss to the Dallas Cowboys. The Giants' offensive line discarded many of the sophisticated blocking techniques and returned to the basics of straight-ahead, knock-your-"John Hicks and Al Simpson," said

Gregory. "Why would you want them strong guys pulling? All they did was get confused. Last Sunday, they just hit their guys and kept their feet moving." "That's how I got here," said Hicks, who was e No. 1 draft choice from Ohio State two years ago, "and that's how I got a scholarship to college from high school.

Hayes Answers Question

"You've got to get their respect. I mean, why did Admiral Nelson run into the Freoch fleet and kill himself?"

What was that? "That's what Woody [Coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State] told us once. It broke us up and be came over to me and asked me what was so funny. I said, 'Well, coach, you said Admiral Nelsoo killed himself.' So Woody just turned and walked right out ooto the practice field, saying, 'All good com-manders want to die in the field.'"

Other members of the Washington Beards are Brad Van Pelt, Tom Mullen

the offense together." Rodgers' Contract Extended ATLANTA, Nov. 11 (UPI) - The

Losing Air

To clean the nation's air of deadly pollutants and to keep it clean iovolves unremitting struggle. Pollutioocontrol technology can be expensive. Many businessmen are reluctant to invest in it when the intangible gains to the community do not appear on profit-and-loss statements. Often they have a difficult choice to make between upgrading an old plant or shutting it down to construct a new facility somewhere else. State and local officials, particularly in areas hard hit by unemployment, are likewise reluctant to enforce pollutioncontrol plans and deadlines for fear of hastening the flight of joba and the shrinking of the tax base. Meanwhile, as old factories are brought under control, new sources of pollution come into existence.

In an effort to cope with all the variables in this complex and changing aituation, the Environmental Protection Agency bas formulated a plausible but potentially dangerous compromise. Under a new policy announced by Deputy E.P.A. Administrator John R. Quarles Jr., new industrial emissions would be permitted to add to the prevailing smog even though Federal air quality standards had not yet been met. The plausible proviso is that equivalent reductions would have to be achieved elsewhere so that there would be no net increase in the area's pollution. Prior to the announcement, it bad been assumed that any new industrial facilities would have to be virtually free of pollution until a region had brought its smog levels in line with Federal standards.

In explaining the new policy, Mr. Quarles stressed that a firm's progress in meeting a Federal deadline to clean up emissions from a particular factory would not be regarded as an offact against new pollution fromanother of its factories. Instead, there would bave to be further reductions beyond existing Federal requirements. In theory, such reductions are readily attainable. In practice, however, they are likely to prove to be somewhat elusive.

The new policy may open up a gigantic loophole. It relieves polluting firms of the most effective pressure for prompt compliance-the desire to meet the Federal standards in order to get approval for a new plant. With extensions frequently being granted for meeting deadlines, companies can operate old facilities that pollute and now, in addition, open new facilities that also pollute.

Perhaps, these dangers will not materialize; but the public has cause for concern. Mr. Quarles himself writes in his new book, "Cleaning Up America": "Pollution kills. We aren't talking about esoteric values or abstruse aesthetics. We are talking about people in hospitals, people dying, people coughing and gasping for breath, people with cancer, emphysema, bronchitis, heart and lung disorders, or any of a score of other deadly or debilitating diseases."

It is by that critical human standard that every policy in the air pollution enforcement field has to be judged. In the industrial cities of the nation, pollution policy determines the breath of life.

Hypocrisy at Turtle Bay

Malawi's delegate to the United Nations spoke blunt truth when he accused some of his African colleagues and their fellow sponsors of "double-faced bypocrisy" in resolutions they rammed through the General Assembly Tuesday, condemning specific nations for trading with South Africa, J. T. X. Muwamba referred particularly to the singling out of the United States and its major alles, along with Israel, for selling arms to South Africa; but his indictment applies to other trade as well.

"All types of military hardware, from both East and West, can be found in South Africa," said Mr. Muwamba -a statement supported in a study just issued by the American Jewish Congress. The study points to Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union, along with Saudi Arabia and several Western countries, as suppliers of arms to the Pretoria Government. But it is on the economic front that the black African states are behaving hypocritically. Will the Marxist dictatorship in Mozambique, for exam-

news, may provide a welcome change from the economics of inertia. Economic stagnation has bred, not stability, but impending crises, at home and abroad.

Certainly, Mr. Carter's personal history and his political campaign provide no support for the belief that he is an enemy of business and a predominantly privateenterprise economic system. He clearly does believe that such a system works best when Government contributes to the economy's growth and stability-and to the solution of particular social problems, And, to paraphrase an often misquoted corporate executive, what is good for the nation is good for business.

Volunteer Executioners

The issues surrounding the case of Gary Mark Gilmore. the convicted murderer who has asked to be allowed to "dle like a man" by facing a firing squad in Utah, will long be hotly debated by legal experts and a lay public interested in crime and punishment.

For the moment, it would seem difficult to disagree with Gov. Calvin Rampton's issuance of a reprieve, until after next week's meeting of the state's Board of Pardons. The Governor's action followed a ruling by the Utah Supreme Court which, by a vote of 4 to 1, had approved the execution next Monday. We are deeply troubled by the view that the state should have the power to take a human life, even at the person's own request. The idea of making the state a partner in what would otherwise be sulcide seems to us morally reprehensible, even without consideration of the further risk that execution-on-demand might subsequently be encouraged by unbearable prison conditions. In more immediate terms, the Gilmore case can only have the effect of giving new support to the proponents of the death penalty. Leaving broad philosophical issues aside, the Utah episode has put the spotlight on the terrifying effects of official killing on the human psyche. What could be more repulsive than the rush of "volunteers" who want to pull the triggers of the guns that are to take Mr. Gilmore's life? The warden in charge of selecting the five executioners has said that he will determine the ultimate choice by lot, after screening out those who sought to participate for "unhealthy" reasons. He was, he added, "looking for solid citizens." What "healthy" reasons for "solid cilizens" attract volunteers to this job? If the firing squad is to remain a tool of the judicial system-an abhorrent thoughtthe inhumane task ought to be performed by employees of the inhumane state. To calist volunteers is to appeal to the very instincts that caused the action for which the criminal is to suffer the ultimate penalty.

Letters to the Editor

Blueprint for Petroleum Conservation

To the Editor: The American people do not realize just how much power and wealth we are allowing the Arab nations to accumulate at our expense, or how serious this drain upon our national resources is. Moreover, we are politically vulnerable because our economy could be crippled by another oil embargo. Are we then inescapably at the mercy of the Arabs? Unlike many of the nations of the West, we have virtually endlesa supplies of coal. Moreover, we are currently wasting energy at a great rate, in inefficient automobiles and space beating as well as in electric-power generation. Conserving our petroleum does not require another buge bureaucracy, but only a system of added taxes on gasoline and other petroleum products, and also on the sale of large new automobiles. In order not to constitute an additional net burden on consumers, these taxes should be compensated for by equivalent reductions in other Federal taxes.

The power companies would be en-: coursged to use coal to produce electricity, and coal would again be used for space heating wherever this can be done consistent with environmental objectives. Also, it might be necessary to consider some relaxation of air-pollution standards in connec tion with the above. Environmental

Natural-Gas Shipment: The Safe Way

To the Editor:

With respect to the controversy thighlighted in your Oct. 7 news article) over the safety aspects of liquefied-natural-gas (LNG) tankers, the issue can be resolved readily if the LNG is simply frozen solid for shipment. An energy expenditure of only 65.2 B.T.U./ib to drop its temperature from -260F to about -300F will turn LNG into a safe inert solid. Not only is the mass of solid LNG made inert by freezing, but it is given many of the properties of an iceberg, and the buoyancy of the ice mass will float the tanker even if its bottom is torn away in a grounding or collision.

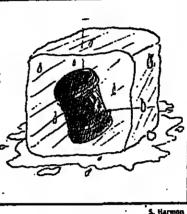

frozeo. Again, as is the practice on LNG taokers, vapor that "boils" off the cargo because of heat penetratioo would be used to fuel the ship's engines. In this regard, there is an ancillary benefit in cryosolidifactioo in that the lower enthalpy state would increase storability because there would be about 13.5 percent less cargo objectives are important, but there may have to be some trade offs.

Obtaining sufficient coal would require major readjustments. For example, newly developed coal reserves in Oklahoma could be exploited and the coal moved by barge on our navigable Arkansas, Mississippi, Ohio and perhaps Monongahela Rivers to produce large amounts of electric power, which would be dispatched over the mountains by long-distance transmission line to the East. Impracticable? Not physically. A little over 300 miles of transmission is all that would be iovolved. However, it would be necessary to convince the mining, power and transportation investors that the Government, after encouraging such program, would not turn and walk away from it in a few years' time, leaving investors bolding the bag. Some kind of assurance would have to be given or the Government might have to undertake certain parts of the scheme. This is a difficult problem because some new type of Federal in-itiative is required. Governor Carter bas asserted that he will provide oew leadership for the American people, and this ia a great opportunity to tlemonstrate it.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE JT. Princeton, N. J., Nov. 4, 1976

formed by in-rushing seawater that cootacts the frozen cargo-Aside from the safety considerations and the concomitant reduction in insurance costs resulting from the lessened hazard, the cryosolid shipment of LNG has significant economic advantages, such as the increase of 20 rcent in the tanker's carrying capacity, brought about because the freezing process increases the density of the LNG. Shipping LNG as a solid not only is safer but it is also cheaper.

Cryosolid transportation should be considered for sny dangerous fluid. For example, chlorine freezes at -256F, hydrochloric acid at -274F, ammonia at -172F, and even a 93.19 perceot pure solution of sulfuric acid becomes a solid at a mere -29F. It is significant that all of the forty liquids listed as economic and financial boycott of South Africa? Not likely-for that would mean ordering home more than 100,000 Mozambiquans who work in South African mines and whose wages are remitted directly in gold to the Government in Maputo, providing it with desperately needed foreign exchange.

Since the closing of its border with Rhodesia. Zambia has been forced more than ever to depend on its trade with South Africa: President Kenneth Kaunda may continue to deplore racial apartheid; but Zambia perforce must maintain its economic links with the country that spawned and practices that hideous doctrine.

South Africa's white rulers have built one of this century's more efficient police states. They have fashioned a draconian structure of 'racial segregation and discrimination and built a burgeoning economy on a system reminiscent of slave labor. The Pretoria Government may well pose a long-run threat to peace in the southern African subcontinent. The United Nations is right to apply what pressures it can to promote change. But resolutions calling for sanctions that even some of the most vociferous sponsors have no intention to invoke can only enfeeble the United Nations, eroding the very machinery for multilateral peace-keeping that smaller and weaker nations are likely to need most of all.

Stock-Market Blues

Wall Street has worked itself into a state of the blues over the election of Jimmy Carter. The basic reason appears to be that most of the financial community wanted President Ford to win and had accepted the view of Mr. Ford and his chief economic aides that a Democratic Administration would try to spend its way back to full employment and thereby breed deep deficits and worse inflation, which in turn would drive up interest rates and drive down stocks and bonds. Indeed, some businessmen and investors have come to fear that a Democratic Administratioo would mean an undermining of the profit and investments on which the capitalist system depends.

In the short run, it may not be easy for Mr. Carter and his economists to persuade the business and financial community that the economic policies practiced by the Ford Administration were not in the nation's or their own best interest. The deepest slump of the postwar period, the biggest dollar deficits on record. the worst inflation in the nation's peacetime history, the sluggish recovery, the persistence of both unemployment and inflation, the rising danger to the international monetary system-all these are regarded, somehow, by Wall Street not as evidences of the failure of conservative economics but as the delayed legacy of the liberal economics of the Democratic Administrations that preceded Messrs. Ford and Nixon.

However, where philosophical arguments or statistical comparisons of the past records of unemployment, inflation, growth rates, profits, etc., during past Democratic and Republican Administrations may fail to persuade the financial community to hope for the bestor at least defer judgment-a solid performance record by Mr. Carter in moving the economy forward without regenerating inflation may convince businessmen and investors that a new Administration, far from being bad

The Public's Buildings

The city is always the last to know. It has taken a privately sponsored study by the New York Landmarka Conservancy and the Columbia Graduate School of Architecture and Planning to find that more than 18,000 buildings in New York City are publicly owned, and that the city itself owns over 90 percent of them; the rest are state and Federal structures. Of these, 760 are noted as buildings of architectural merit, from listed landmarks to lesser gems and curiosities.

what has been happening to these buildings? This year, twelve were sold as surplus at public auction, Some continue in use, and some are abandoned. No one knows whether they are preserved, altered or demolished; no one is concerned about what their best functional, cultural and economic uses might be.

The Conservancy's study, therefore, makes two valuable contributions. It provides, for the first time, a systematic inventory of an important body of public property that can and should be used as the basis of a constructive and consistent policy for the management and disposition of city-owned real estate.

It also makes it clear that specific, practical programs by qualified private groups can be extremely valuable to a city that must set its priorities by the limited funds and personnel available. The Conservancy plans to follow up this survey with a pilot rehabilitation project. This is a better way of dealing with the city's future than by the wringing of hands.

Of Music and Freedom To the Editor:

Elena Obraztsova's recent appearance at the Met, and at Avery Fisher Hall on Nov. 8, are significant for a number of reasons. First, such performances help strengthen cultural ties between the Soviet and the American peoples. Second, and more sadly, they remind us of the many Sovict Jewish musicians who have been denied the right to emigrate and to live and work in the land of their choice.

One such person is Stella Goldberg, a 44-year-old Moscow pianist who has been asking for permission for herself and her seven-year-old son to join her husbaod in Israel. Her husband, Viktor Yoran, is a renowned cellist who left the Soviet Union in 1969, Ms. Goldberg and her son have been applying since then to join him but have been repeatedly refused since the Soviets consider her husband "a traitor to the Soviet Union."

Ms. Goldberg recently wrote, "My husband did not and docs not commit any actions hostile to the Soviet Union, and yet we, his family, have nevertheless been denied the right to emigrate. I alone am responsible for the well-being of a young child and for my husband's mother, who is old and in poor health."

Leonard Bernstein. Vladimir Asbkenazy, Zino Francescatti and Pierre Fournier are among the many musicians and others who have spoken out for Stella Goldberg's freedom. Those who attended Ms. Obraztsova's

India's Priority

To the Editor: India is not America. The First Amendment should not be used as the standard for measuring developments in that country.

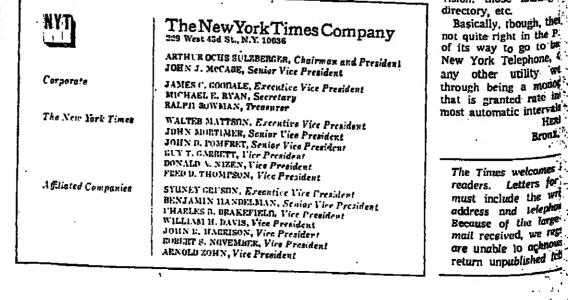

The greatest problem in India is food production and social development. In this situation, press freedom is but a luxury for the thirty-million upper class.

Seventy percent of its 600 million people are illiterate. Fifty percent of the population are under fifteen years of age. India's highly intellectualized hypercritical press never recognized the country's real problems. Let it therefore rest awhile and return with its agitation when everybody has enough to eat and can afford its intellectualism.

What India needs is a strong government to discipline its unpatriotic millionaires and their student children. so that decent employment can be created for the poor millions.

At present, Indira Gandhi is their only hope for leadership in their fight for survival. Let us back her up. MAURITZ SUNOT MORTENSEN premises. thou in relation to the events in India Let us not forget the horrifying conis laughable. The Japanese-Americans ditions in India before July 1975, All we read about was abject, perpetual poverty, food shortages, corruption and uncontrolled population growth. Let us be honest We had, in fact, given up on India for several years as a hopeless proposition, a perpetual baskct case, a country to write tearful editorials about, or, better still, to be kept as far as possible from one's consciousness, as if it were an unpleasantness that should go away.

By Ghulam Faruki

WINGDALE, N.Y .- Since Mrs. indira Gandhi's assumption of emergency powers has elicited a consistently unfavorable reaction in this country, it may be worthwhile to question the universal relevance of some of our

To protest now that Mrs. Gandhi is using means that are too drastic is the height of hypocrisy. It is as if we needed a wretched India 'for some psychological needs of our own. Mrs. Gandhi's surgical strokes are precise and measured. HCr priorities are exactly right, for India cannot, at this atage, afford the luxury of American-style "politics-as-usual" when people are crying out for the bare necessities of

It must be emphasized that the civil liberties that were curtailed were of relevance only to a amall group. What is the value of freedom of dissent or a free press to an illiterate farmer or a grossly underpaid teacher in an Indian village? The well-off elite that opposed Mrs. Gandhi's socioeconomic policies is, not surprisingly, overrepresented in the Indian community living in the United States. These then are the folks who write letters of indignation to the press or hold protest meetings to vilify Mrs. Gandhi. They are about as representative of the Indian masses as the Cubans in Miami are of the tailing hordes to Cuba.

In Defense of Mrs. Gandhi

For Americans to act holier-thanwho were put behind bars during World War II presented a negligible threat to the United States compared to the jailed Indian leaders who had actually invited the armed forces of Iodia to disobey the orders of their duly elected Government.

The Vietnam conflict, which ostensibly was the occasion for the Central Intelligence Agency and Federal Bureau of Investigation excesses against American citizens, dio not at any time put the United States in a peril comparable to the anarchy facing India before Mrs. Gandhi's coup.

Much has been made of the fact that she was under fire from the courts when she declared the emergency. Her legal problem consisted essentially of one of her aides on the Government payroll participating in her re-election campaign a few days ahead of his vacatiog bis Government position.

Many astute observers of India have tacitly felt that dictatorship was inevitable sooner or later in view of the rising disaffection of the populace and the absence of any vieble alternative to the Congress Party. The only questions were how much bloodshed the revolution might cause and whether there would be a dictatorship of the left (the Communists) or the right (me Hindu fascist parties or the military) Now that the center is in firm control and it all happened without violence, many may feel relieved if oot joyous.

The achievements of the Government since it assumed emergency powers are there for all to are. Ask the peasants and the shum-dwellers of India. Theirs is the only country in the world where prices are coming down, not going up, For a citizen aeeking a Government licenae or permit of one sort or another, the bureaucratic machine moves five times as fast as previously and without the bribes that used to be an accepted fact of life. Tax frauds are being caught up with, Birth-control laws with teeth are being implemented. Government officials are beginning to see themselves as accountable to the people.

I am well aware that the natural history of dictatorships, benign though they may be to begin with, is an infamous one. The ascent back to democracy is alwaya a much more difficult trek than the spiral down to totalitarianism, However, Mrs. Gandhi did not have many alternatives available to her. The fact that she decided to take the bull by the horns and mobilize a large nation for constructive action should earn her our respect and good wishes.

The Middle Eastern Realities Facing Carter

By Edward R. F. Sheehan

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. -- Some of us familiar with the complex problems of the Middle East found little comfort in the Presidential campaign. One might have fancied that, after the trauma of the October war and the endeavors of Henry A. Kissinger to conceive a more balanced policy, the Presidential candidates this year might have themselves endeavored to propound the broad American interest rather than to pander to one party, . On the contrary, they vied for Jewish votes with extravagant pronouncements, discouraged Israel from making concessions in the future - and, for transparent political motives, President Ford promised Israel "concussion bombs," among other delicacies.

Now that the election is decided. President-elect Carter will perforce confront the realities of the Middle East. The overriding reality is that the regioo has reverted to its chronic instability (witness Lebanon) and may pe for a more general explosion that could engulf not only . Arabs and Israelis but the great powers as well. The new President, when he assumes office, must undertake urgent measures to conclude the Arab-Israeli cooflict. No progress has come to pass in addressing that conflict since the second Sinai agreement, of September 1975. In fact, that agreement severed outstanding queationa (including the status of Jerusalem), which should be defined in appropriate components and addressed in aeparate subcommittees. A consensua in favor of the first option still prevails among most levels of the United States Government and of the international community at large. (Similar proposals emerged in the report of the Brookings Institution study group, composed of distinguished experts of various background, including Zbigniew Brzezlnski, one of Jimmy Carter's close advisers.)

Such a settlement would perforce include the demilitarization of the Golan Heights; most of the Sinal with Sharm el-Sheikh: much or all of the West Bank of the Jordan and the Gaza Strip; the stationing in the demilitarized zones of United Nations forces that could oot be removed save with the consent of all parties; and great-power guarantees deposited with the Security

Jerusalem would remain a united city, possibly to be governed by a municipal council with Israell and Arab members, but basic soverei gntv

Jordan and the occopied territories would accept an invitation to Geneva. Unless the invitation is offered, unless the Palestiniana are tendered the chance to negotiate their own future, then they will continue to disrupt any peacemaking that ignores them.

The adventure of peacemaking will be fraught with risk for our new President. No settlement he can propose will satisfy everybody; an ideal peace for either party is unachievable." The Arab governments remain ready to negotiate with Israel, and to accept its legitimacy, in return for their ter-ritory, But first they must end the fighting in Lebanon once and for all, and conceive a common negotiating policy the Uoited States can work with. This may require considerable American pressure.

Likewise the new President, if be truly wants peace, will apply effective pressure upoo Israel to oroduce concessions - to abandon, for example, and very soon, the present Israeli policy of expropriating Arab land on the West Bank and on the Golan Heights. For if Israel continues its expropriations at the current rate, there will soon remain little territory to negotiate. American arms, instead of being lavished on Israel in the fatuous hope they will make it "flexible." should be rationed carefully and linked to concessions at the conference table; Intense counterpressures may be mounted on Mr. Carter by some Israeli sympathizers in the United States, no doubt claiming that Israel's survival depends on retention of Arab territory.

The new President's courage in resisting will be a measure of his leadership. Mr. Carter should not allow himself the leisure of a "learning period" of six months or a year for the Middle East, i doubt that events will be that patient; more delays might invite disaster. No new position papers need to be written.

The consensus that already prevails among most levels of the United States Government-in the State Department, in the Ceotral Intelligence Agency, in the Pentagon and elsewhere-favoring a settlement based upon the 1967 boundaries, a state for the Palestinians, strong guarantees for Israel, must be translated into the imperatives of bigh policy.

Edword R. F. Sheehon, of Harvord's Center for International Affairs, is the outhor of "The Arabs, Israelis, and Kissinger." This article is odopled from the final chapter.

Syria from Egypt-aod by stimulating such divisions throughout the Arab body politic contributed indirectly to the carnage in Lebanon. Peripheral solutions - step-by-step diplomacy - have ceased to be feasible. The goal of the new President, and of American diplomacy, must be a comprehensive settlement between Israel, the Arab states, and the dispossessed-now desperate-Palestinians

In the spring of 1975, following the collapse of oegotiations between Israel and Egypt for an interim agreement. the United States Government undertook a "reassessment" of its policy in the Middle East. Numerous American officials involved with the area, and the large majority of experts on foreign policy consulted by the Secretary of State, urged adoptioo of what I call "the first optioo":

The United States abould announce its conception of a final settlement in the Middle East, based upon the 1967 frontiers of Israel, with minor modifications to be negotiated by the parties. and containing strong guarantees for Israel'a security. The Geneva conference could be reconvened. The Soviet Union should be encouraged to cooperate in this quest to resolve all in East Jerusalem would be restored to the Arabs. Should Israel so wisb, the United States could seal its security with a formal defense treaty.

Council.

Moreover, Israel would not be asked to withdraw at once. It would simply accept the principle, then negotiate a timetable tied to concessions from the Arabs. For each new Arab commitment to peace - nonbelligerency, an end to boycotts and economic warfare, free passage of goods and people, etc. -Israel would retreat further to its old frontiers until the process is consummated: fioal peace, and formal recognition of Iarael's legitimacy.

The entire process might consume some several years, but it must not be dragged out indefinitely. Of paramount importance and urgeocy is Israel's consent in principle to total (or practically total) withdrawal in exchange for contractual peace. This is an outline, not a blueprint.

A hundred arguments could be hurled against it, and it conjures up a thouaand risks-for the Arab moderates no lesa than for the Israelis. But the alternatives are too slow, or too uncertain, or completely sterile, and they conjure risks that are greater still.

The settlemeot-to be relevant, to be realistic; and fically to be justmust also accommodate the Palestinian people. The Palestinians must be integrated into the oegotiating process, offered a state in the West Bank and in Gaza. I have recently returned from a lengthy trip to Israel, Syria, Jordan and the West Bank, and I am convioced more than ever that the majority of Palestinians would accept auch a solution-just as the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization itself bas loog hinted likewise.

Now, more than ever, the mass of Palestinians seem to recognize that international constraiots will oot permit them to recover all of their bomeland. Now, more than ever, the masa of them who inhabit Jordan, the West Bank and Gaza seem willing to accept. that lesser Palestine that would at least provide them with a flag and national identity. Once they have that, for economic imperatives alone, I am convinced they will wish to forge a confederation with Hashemite Jordan. Theirs oeed not be a radical leftist state. No less than Israel, royalist Jordan and Saudi Arabia will not tolerate a regime of radicals on their borders. The Saudis' wishes should carry weight, for the Saudis will be called upon to subsidize the new Palestine. Nor should the Syrians covet a radical republic on the Weat Bank-they bave proved, during the civil war, that they did oot covet one in Lebanon.

Moreover it is very possible that, in the wake of the Palestinian disasters in Lebanon; a P.L.O. leadership expanded to embrace Palestinians from

The Fafnir bearing story: how private enterprise keeps new product development rolling.

At the turn of the century, when America was picking up speed, almost all the bearings it rolled on came from Europe. In 1911, a group of Connecticut Yankees decided to change all that and started The Fafnir Bearing Company. Their initial target: 150 ball bearings a day.

Incentives and inventions

But American industry was just beginning to accelerate. Soon, an amazing parade of new machines came along. And they've never stopped coming. Because the American system is designed to reward those who find better ways to meet people's needs.

And bearings were essential for all these new machines. For dental drills that turn at half a million rpm... and farm equipment that operates in severe conditions of dust and corrosion. For lunar modules that function in extreme heat on their sunny side and extreme cold in the shadow. For kidney dialysis machines that make the difference between life and death...and golf cars that just make life more fun. The list seems endless.

So today, Textron's Fafnir Bearing Division makes 19,000 varieties of bearings, to keep machines rolling all over the world. Fafnir has grown from seven people to seven thousand. And it expects to keep on growing ... as it continues to work on new ways to do what people want done. That's what private enterprise is all about.

Spreading the word

It's a story that people can understand and maybe even get excited about. So Textron has made it into a television commercial. You may have seen it on the election coverage programs. Together with other commercials like it dealing with other stories from Textron-about Talon zippers, Homelite chain saws, Bell helicopters. There'll be more in the future, because we think stories like these are worth telling. You'll find several of them in our booklet "How Private Enterprise Works at Textron". Just write: Textron, Providence, Rhode Island 02903.

The Goldeo Years. It is a term that causes many elderly Bronx residents to smile sardonically or snort derisively. "You simply cannot enjoy life knowing that whenever you go out for a walk, someone may be following you," said Mae Cohen, who is 68 years old.

-Mrs. Cohen, who lives with her 80vear-old hnsband, Samnel, in a $67-amonth walk-up on the Grand Concourse near 171st Street, suffered a broken arm two years ago when a young man pushed her down the sidewalk near ber bome, Strangely, he did not take her pure. Four months ago, Mr. Cohen was mugged on the second floor of the spartment building by two young men who escaped with $35.

The Cobens spend most of their daytime hours at a center for the elderly, where Mrs. Cohen loves to sing and dance. The couple used to spend additional bours sitting in the sun in a nearby park, but gave this up because youths began throwing bottles and stones at them. Unlike many elderly Bronx residents whose childreo bave virtually abandoned them, the Cobens have been invited by their soo to live with him and his family io Plainview, L.L. But so far, the Cohens bave refused.

They do, however, occasionally take the train to Plainview to visit their son and his family. They have to if they want to see their grandchildren because the soo refuses to drive his family into the old neighborhood. The last time he did, someone stole the battery from his car.

Cohen recalled. Will the Cobens ever change their minds about leaving their crime-riddeo Bronx oeigbborhood for the relative tranquillity of Long Island?

"That's no life for us," Mrs. Coben said firmly. "Our friends are around bere and this is our life, and we sing and dance and keep active at the senior ceoter. The center gives us a reasoo to exist. There is no center in Plainview. L.l., and if we moved there, it would be like sitting and waiting for death."

If Mayor Beame's latest proposals to restrict pornography are adopted aod enforced, Eighth Avenue will never be the same.

No fewer than 14 pornographic movie houses, peep shows and "massage parlors" were operating yesterday afternoon on the avenue between 42d and 47th Streets, one of the city's major areas for sexual excitement. The zoning proposals threaten to shut them all down.

These sex shops were inviting cus-tomers through flashing lights, suggestive signs and explicit photographs and giving a generally seedy tone to a street that is home to pawnshops, restaurants, hardware stores and the like.

Oo the sidewalk outside the Pleasure Palace, between 44th and 45th Streets, where "Live Nude Models" were being advertised, a young woman with exces-sive blue eye makeup whispered to passers by, "Going out tonight?"

Above each window was an explicit description of the acts that could beseen and the number, sex and age of the participants. The only sounds were ter," said the sign outside the Venus theater, between 45th and 46th Streets, quarters dropping into the machine slots and the film projectors that they triggered.

Across the street, the Show World Center advertised "Hottest Live Acts in U.S.*

At the Cameo theater on the next block, "Bordello Girls" and "House of Kinky Pleasures" were said to be "2 of the Hottest Porn Flicks of the Year," according to a sign beside the box office.

A block uptown, a few doors from the Pleasure Palace, the pink entryway to Hungry Hilda's bore a sign saying simply, "Topless."

"New York's Most Unique Adult Theawhere "3 Hit Porn Flicks" were being screened. At the Capri theater down the street, "That Lady From Rio" was showing, and between the two, the Eros I offered the "Finest All-Male

Films in N.Y." and a "Inve Male Show." For anyone still unsatisfied, the House of Happiness, on the corner of 46th Street, had a sign that said, "Come in and Be Satisfied ..., Girls" Girls. Girls.

Three establishments side by side down the block were called, Show & Tell, French Quarter and Sugar Shack, the last of which had a simple sign on its otherwise plain door that said, "Super Fine. Young Girls Inside." It was impossible to say yesterday what would take their place if these establishments were forced to close. A' number of non-sex stores are empty, indicating that the street is not considered a choice location. But if the sexual presence were eliminated, it might yet come one.

In other parts of the Time Square area, fast-food places have sometimes replaced sex shops ("From bare breasts to chicken breasts," says Sidney Baum-garten, an aide to Mayor Beame). But the proximity of the Broadway stage and the substantial midtown traffic, might encourage more real restaurants on Eighth Avenue.

The first step, the city thinks, is to make people want to go there.

About Real Estate Property Preservation and Housing Blend

By ALAN S. OSER Special to The New York Times

ISLIP, L:L-The first thought in many minds when the Landon K. Thorne estate on Great South Bay went on the market two years ago was to make it a park. Islip's chief plan-ner recommended as much. But the cost was high.

Then Jerry Kramer, a Long Island builder known for houses put up under the Suffolk Village name, acquired the site for about $1.2 million from the trustees of the Thorne estate. He was ready to turn it over to the town for a park without condemnatioo proce ings if the town decided to foot the hill. But he hoped for something quite different-town approval of a rezoning plan to enable him to build a planned townhouse community while Public hearings and private negotiations came and went. One plan for 220 one-family townhouse units was re-that most of the land would remain untouched. An associatioo of the townhouse huyers will own and maintain a clubhouse, tennis courts, swimming pool, a marina with its canal and boathouse, several ponds and wide landscaped areas, together with sunkeo gardens and other formal plaotings created for the late Mr. Thorne by Umberto Innocente, an Italian landscape architect who was a studeot of Frederick Law Olmsted.

A hleod, in other words, of housing and preservation, and one on which the hullder, who opened the models only a couple of weeks ago, says he has already taken deposits on $5 million worth of housing. "By the end of this week we should have 60 signed contracts," said Robert Peare, a partner. As Mr. Kramer never tired of explaining to townspeople when he was seeking the zooing change, failure to allow higher density in number of units would have left the land vulnerable to conveotional development of 99 four-bedroom and five-bedroom houses. That would have wrecked the handiwork of Mr. Thorne, a banker and sportsman, an early supporter of Wendell Willkie for the Presidency io 1940, and a man who lavished personal attention on his estate.

He bought the land in a pristine state in the 1920's, and over time built a 30-room mansion, a guest house with an indoor swimming pool, and a house his yacht captain and another for his son. After he died in 1964, his widow maintaioed the property with "an indoor staff of seven or eight" and his 14 to 25 people ou the grounds, a family spokesman said. Mr. Thorne's widow dedicated 114 acres of the property on the water side to the Nature Conservancy, a nonprofit conservation organization based in Arlingtoo, Va., so that it will remain a natural wetlaod in perpetuity. The site looks out on Fire Island. The rest of the property—116 acres—was offered for sale after Mrs. Thorne died.

"When I saw it, I couldn't believe my eyes," said Mr. Kramer. Environmental and zoning uncertainties had led other prospective purchasers to insist on making the sale contingeot oo their ability to get the approvals essential for development. But Mr. Kramer paid all cash, aubject to no conditions, signing the contract in September 1974 and taking title the following March. He also bought four additional acres from a church.

He retained the New York City archi-tectural firm of Conklin & Rossant to do the planning and design work. The upshot is a community of 31 buildings of four or six units of housing each, clustered around center courts and situated on the edges of the property. They are sited to take advantage of the views -in some cases of the large central pond inhahited by a flock of geese.

There are four types and models of houses, one-story and two-story, priced from $59,000 to $85,000. The price variation is a function of location. Most buyers have been in at least a 50 percent tax hracket, ready to take on in addition to the standard costs of home ownership the monthly common charges, estimated at $73 to $93. Insulated Against Materialism

Their $250-a-month loft on Church Street is well stocked with books and records but otherwise gives the impres-sion that it has been well insulated against the lures of materialism, which bave rarely tempted them. She has an electric typewriter. They share a Water Pik. "My dentist yelled and screamed at me for three years," Mr. Zeniuk cxplained.

Clothes are rarely purchased and furniture, as Miss Meissner puts it, "comes and goes." Almost all their fur-niture was either found on the street, on loan from a friend, or, she said, al-most apologetically, of a rose velvet chair purchased second-hand for $20, 'you have to buy something.'

Her parents, who live in Oklahoma, have covered them under a major med-ical policy. One doctor will allow their bills to accumulate and then exchanges his services for a painting.

She takes pride in her cooking and serves an elegant cup of espresso with fresh lemon in white demitasse cups and with silver spoons. "We probably wouldn't enjoy our espresso if we had to drink it from jelly glasses," she explained.

Mr. Zeniuk said that the worst part about their income was taking sub-ways, "At times it becomes very unways, "A

They had a television set but when they realized they were watching it too much, he threw it out a window. "See," he said opening a window to point out the television several floors below in a littered alley, Suddenly his ears caught a chipping sound. "Someone in a neighboring building was removing paint from windows.

"Better Homes and Gardens," he observed in disgust.

The Zeniuks are not opposed to mak-ing more money. If it should happen, they say they would spend extra income on travel.

Perhaps the first test of their phil-osophy came recently when Mr. Zeniuk was notified that he had won a fellowship to study io Germany next year with a $1,000-a-month tax-free stipend. Miss Meissner said they had experienced only a slight change of attitude. "For a year we don't have to scramble and worry. So there is a sense of re-lief. For a while."

The Zeniuks have put a minimum of effort into loft improvements because it means time away from their work and also because they believe that lofts are cheap spaces in which to work and live. Turning lofts into mammoth homes denies the functional intent of the warehouse, he said, and allowing them to be photographed (another sore subject) attracts the wrong elemeotsnon-artists with salaries.

Wendy Wasdahl and Ron Janowich, who would not allow their loft to be photographed, made it clear that renovating their loft, was not a glamorous project. "It was a nightmare," said Miss

Wasdahl, a dancer, "We didn't go out, We didn't see people. We didn't buy clothes. We didn't have a kitchen sink for more than a year."

Now, Miss Wasdahl and Mr. Janowich, a painter, have for $300 a month, one bedroom, a large living room, kitchen, bath, his studio and her

000--$3,000 of which they got as reimbursements for work done on their previous loft.

They have a joint income of about $7,000 a year, derived from bis construction work, the sale of two or three paiotings a year, and her 25 hours a week job filing in an office and boosted just recently hy a $2,000 foundation grant.

"Brown rice. It's the key," she said. He takes a lot of vitamins. They buy frozen fish filets for about SI.59 a package and cut one into three small portions. "It's disgusting. I wouldn't recommend it to anyone," she said.

Blender With Trading Stamps

Last year the only clothes they bought was a pair of jeaos or two. A friend gave Miss Wasdahl some T-shirts, ruined in the silk-screening process. They got a hlender with trad-ing stamps. His parents gave them a washing machine, because the oearest laundry is a half-mile away. A neighbor has a dryer.

Once they finished their loft and began to relax a little, she hought four designer skirts for $10 each at a dis-count store. The skirts became a lesson in the escalation of material goods, First she remembered she had no winter shoes or pantyhose. Then she had to buy a slip.

Her biggest frustration is profes-sional. She is director of a dance group, the Shared Forms Theater, which holds workshop performances in the loft, hut it is difficult to get reviewers or an audieoce to come to an unknown address for an unknown group. He finds it comfortiog that be has never known an artist who starved to death. He is 28, and too young for the art boom of the 1960's but be remains optimistic. "It's times like this when the best art gets dooe," he said. "You do it for the reason you should be doing it. Some-how artists have always been able to cope, your art gives you strength." Expensive fabrication costs can be a problem for sculptors. James Reineking and Sonja Henrixson, a painter, earn about $7,000, mostly from his work as an electrician, and ber work as a waitress about six months a year. His ooly credit is with a Long Island steel drum manufacturer who does his fabrication, which averages $500 for each piece and can run over $1,000. In Europe he uses his dealer's credit for fabrication—they split the cost— and at any given time, said be is several thousand dollars in debt for fabrication. He sells about one or two pieces a year. Unmarried Couples: Women May Be Losers Under the Law

By NAN ROBERTSON

One of the nation's leading authorities on Family Court matters warns that womeo are very likely to be the losers among unwed couples who are increasingly and, in her opinion, "misguidedly" deciding against legal marriage even when there are children.

Judge Nanette Dembitz of the Family Court of New York State said that "although the female may opt against a legal marriage, she may, nevertheless, find the end result" to be decidedly to her disadvantage.

She pointed out that in the most recent ruling in New York, the court completely rejected arguments made by "a de facto spouse at-tempting to claim some of the de facto family's assets after the couple split

Judge Dembitz's views on the legal repercussions of the swelling numbers of "unmarried couples all around us" came during a speech and question-and-answer session before the New York County Lawyers and question-and-answer session here're the New York County Lawyers Association. Her speech, under the auspices of the Women's Rights Committee of the association, was entitled, "The Other Side of the Coin: Have Women's Rights Changed Women's Dutles?" She said that the growing tendency of unwed couples to avoid legalizing their union, even when there are children, "flouts anthropolo-gists' analyses" that marriage is for the purpose of meeting the needs of the children and is rooted in the family. Her reasoning was, "in part, because it is linked to the double standard of sexual conduct which men inpose oo women: that is, that extramarital sex is more condoned for the male than the

A case challenging the provision is now pending in the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court-the intermediate appeals court.

"We shall see how the Appellate Division views the constitutionality of the somewhat subtle sex differentiation in favor of the male that is embedded in this provision," Judge Demhitz said. She also discussed matrimonial law that affects child support. New

It could be argued, Judge Dembitz said, that this discrimination against the male "is justified oo the ground that the financial position of fathers as a class is better than that of mothers as a class."

However, she cited one of her own recent opinions that it comes "within the Supreme Court's doctrine of an unconstitutional classification based on sex."

"Mothers cannot be deemed forever exempt from child-support be-cause of their child-bearing function," she said.

Dr. Lisa Serbin, a psychologist at the State University of New York at Binghampton, suggests that to some extent the factors are beyond a parent's control

"Parents will find it very frustrat-ing," she said, trying to help their chil-dren develop in nonstereotyped ways." In Dr. Serbin's view, the lessons of the culture remain pervasive-through television, friends, relatives. A great many people value exactly the characteristics extreme girlishness, extreme ability to understand spatial concepts, while girls tend to do more painting, working on the control of fine move-ments that will make them better at handwritiog than boys are.

If a girl wanders into the boys' play area, Dr. Serbin says, she tends to be ignored, and a nonconformist bay suffers the same fate. So they don't, but when the children play alone, they readily try out each other's activities boyishness-that feminists decry. By the age of 3, she says, children have generally accepted a whole panoply of Although there's a lot of variation among children, research shows that preschool girls usually already know about their role as helpless, pretty ones (even if their parents have tried to convince them otherwise), and boys already know about the need to be adventurous, aggressive rescuers of helpless girls.

The boys' plight is every bit as troubling to Dr. Serbin as the girls', since it puts a burden on them that, she says, often emerges in the emo-tional difficulties of male college students.

The pressure of friends in nursery school she says, is so powerful that even if a teacher attempts to provide. the play materials equally for both sexes, it may not work.

Feminists cite as an example the fact that boys take to playing with blocks, which is said to enhance their

But why, when a girl has had a woman doctor, won't she accept the fact that women can be doctors? Dr. Serbin says that despite great changes In society, such prestige jobs are still held, overwhelmingly, by men. And she speculates that since children tend to categorize very roughly, in black and white, one instance does not penetrate the rules they draw about who men are and who women are. But they can learn, eventually, and Dr. Serbin feels that parents should keep trying to teach them.

So does Barbara Sprung, an educator who directs the Non-Sexist Child Development Project of the Women's Action Alliance. She thinks parents ought repeatedly to counteract influences outside the home-including influences such as best friends.

If your child's best friend comes from a family where the sex roles are rigid and your child is starting to imi-tate that family as well as yours, Mrs. Spring suggests that "you do a little proselytizing" of your own. Mother might jog with the children, she says, and make sure the idea of woman-as-athlete is not lost on any-body; father might cook with them. On walks with your children and their friends, Mrs. Sprang says, it helps to draw attention to a woman police officer or a man tailor.

Mrs. Sprung, likewise, would coun-ter the influence of television at every turn, mentioning bow ridiculous it is for a woman in a TV commercial "to be avoited about elements the Mitch of "to be excited about cleaning the kitchen."

As for nursery school, Mrs. Sprung advises parents to see if there are girls' areas and boys' areas that seen to ex-clude children of the opposite sex. If such areas exist, a parents' group might be formed to discuss them with the school — "not in an argumentative way," she said, "not a confrontation, but just, "What are we going to do about it?" The result, presumably, would be more teacher intervention to break down the segregation, Mrs. Sprung says, ooting that when a won-an walks into a block area to play, the girls usually follow.

Mrs. Sprung's approach is, on the whole, low-key. She believes that the family will, in the end, prove to have been the most powerful influence, despite setbacks. She sees no point in getting upset if a child is going through a particular stereotype phase - insist-ing on doing nothing but housework, for example.

"Children like to try on roles," she said, and housework is a legitimate life option anyway. She says that parents should aim at keeping as many options open as they can.

One way to limit the options, in Mrs. Sprung's opinion, is to be overzealous with your children about feminism. It has always been true, that parents who are zealots - about anything - have frequently found their children fighting on the other side.

Manhattan, with 34 murders, and Brooklyn, with 25, reported more homicides in this age group, the crimes against the elderly in the Bronx have réceived more attention because, for some reason, they are generally more appalling and vicious.

The broad pattern of violence against the elderly led the police recently to expand the Senior Citizens Robbery Unit from a Bronx operation to a citywide

But it is the headlines of the last few months that tell the story best: "Youth Held in Murder of Bronx Man Locked in Closet Three Days," "Grand-mother Is Raped and Robbed by a Burglar in Her Bronx Home," "Elderly Bronx Couple, Recently Robbed, Take Their Own Lives, Citing Fear," "Two More of the Aged Killed in the Bronx."

"What's going on here in a massacre, a'massacre!" said Abe Simon, a social worker who directs the Victims of Grime Aid League (VOCAL), a nonprofit volunteer group that helps about 250 elderly crime victims in the Broax each year. "So much is happening here that pobody can really help these people."

The police and Borough President Robert Abrams are quick to point out that oot all of the Bronx is a snake pit for the elderly. Among the thirty areas considered safe are Riverdale, Mosholu, Throgs Neck, Pelham Parkway, Co-op City, Pelham Bay, Parkchester, City Is-land, the upper Grand Concourse and Van Cortlandt.

Area of Concentration

Most of the victims seem to be concentrated in the South and West Bronx, especially in an area of rapid racial changes around the Grand Concourse, bounded by Fordham Road on the north, 161st Street on the south, Webster Avenue on the east and University Avenue on the west. The area, which includes the Tre-mont, Morrisania and High Bridge neighborhoods, was once almost exclu-sively white. Today its population is about 80 percent hlack and Hispanic, and 20 percent white and 20 percent white. The blacks and Hispanic peopla tend to be a mixture of working people and welfare families with few elderly mem bers, while the whites are mostly elderly Jews living on Social Security payments. They bave remained in the area either for sentimental reasons, or because they cannot afford to move. "About 99 percent nf the victims are white," said Detective Thomas Sullivan

the Bronx, "and about 99 percent of the criminals are black."

The racial pattern of crime against nlder people varies throughout the city depending on the makeup of each neighborhood. Elderly blacks are often victims, too, as was the case last Wednesday in the Bedford Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn where two black teen-agers knocked a 103-year-old woman, also black, to the sidewalk to steal her bag of groceries.

Statistics Disputed

Moreover, several black leaders in the Bronx, including Albert Goodman, the president of the South Bronx National Association for the Advanceme nf Colored People, and the Rev. Kenneth Folkes, the pastor of the Mount Carmel Baptist Church, disputed police statistics on Bronx crime.

"I just don't believe that black kids are doing it anymore than white kids." Mr. Folkes said, "And as for crime, it's one of the problems of the times in which we are living. I'm not excusing the young people for any undigni-fied thing they may do, but I also sym-pathize with them over their frustratioo about the double standard of jus-

They see cops behave lawlessly on the picket lines, and they see that whole mess with Watergate, and they see the rich can get away with almost anything, while poor youngsters get the full brunt of the law."

"On top of that," Mr. Folkes con-tinued, "the New York school system did not prepare them for anything, so they are unable to find a job. Faced with the occessity of having to eat, and a stomach that doesn't understand when you aren't able to give it age when you aren't able to give it anything, they turn to crime, which is unfortunate

'Ought to Be Punished'

But the Rev. Daniel Nickerson, the black pastor of the Tried Stone Bap-tist Church, took a tougher line against the young offenders.

'I'm horrified with the whole criminal intent of the young people in the Bronx," he said. "I think they ought to be punished and their names publicized, and treated as criminals, not youths, when they are nld enongh to commit these heinous crimes. I don't care who they are. It has nothing to do with color. It has to do with character.

The criminals, many as young as 12 and 13, prey on the elderly, he said, because the elderly are often frail, vulnerable, unable to defend themselves fear retaliation. Some criminals_also have the impression, Detective Sullivan said, that elderly Jews, who went through the Depression, do not trust banks and have hoarded treasures in their apartments.

"There is a lot of hostility between the senior citizens and the kids," he said. "The senior citizens give the kids the feeling that the blacks have ruised the neighborhood by moving in, and they show they don't respect the kids in other ways, like kicking the kids in the back if they don't move quickly enough off apartment steps, or not saying Thank you' when a kid holds a door open for them. So the kids, in turn, don't respect the elderly." "They are not human, they are not human!" Mrs. Engehmann said, near tears, as she sat on the edge of her bed in the foyer. "About a year and a half ago, two hlack teen-agers came up from behind me on the Concourse and pushed ma down on the sidewalk.

Then they took my pocketbook, "Thave an idea," she went on, "Why not send them all to an island some-where? Bot you can't do that in America; there are too many bleeding hearts. Especially the judges, They're the big-gest problem. I hlame them. How dare they let all these young criminals loose on us?

Mrs. Englemann's three-room, $100amonth apartment is filled with the memories of a lifetime fading photo-graphs of her two children, the piano they played nn when they were grow-ing up, their nld clothes.

Tm Not Moving

Has she ever thought about moving to a safer neighborhood? "I'm not moving, let them go to hell!" she shouted. "I'm stubborn. Why should I give up the apartment I've lived in for 22 years? My children grow up here give up the apartment i've niver in for 32 years? My children grew up here. We were all happy. We had parties. Even my younger sister got married here. Why doo't they just keep those monsters in jail where they belong?"

Mrs. Engelmann's life is pretty much like that of the other elderly people in her neighborhood. She spends most of the day at a senior citizens' center, walks home with a group of elderly people before it gets dark and then locks herself intn her apartment for the evening.

"Everybody's scared, everybody's afraid," she said, "But you ask your-self, 'What can you do?' When I go home and open the door at night, and I haven't been burt, I say to myself, "Thank God!" There are relatively few peopla or crime in the Bronx. Mr. Simon's volunteers take the victims to court, assist them in filling out applications to the New York State Crime Victim's Compensation Board and help them replace damaged dentures and eyeglasses. The group has headquarters at 900 Grand Concourse and works only in the Bronz, "because this is where we are most needed," Mr. Simon said,

Police Offer Help

Officers from the Senior Citizens" Robbery Unit give safety lectures at senior citizens' centers, pass out police whistles to the elderly and provide rides to court for elderly victims of crime. The newly formed Crime Victims Assistance Center, at 155 West 72d Street in Manhattan, sends a counselor to the Bronx to work with elder-ly crime victims as part of a federally financed pilot program administred by the city's Office of the Aging. Two other center employees give crime-pre-vention lectures at the senior citizens centers.

And then there is Police Officer Richard Croce of the 48th Precinct in the Bronx. He gives up one lunch hour a week to escort the elderly from the Mount Eden Center, at 1660 Morris Avenue, to mearby banks and stores. He also stops by the center several times a day on his beat.

"These people lead such miserable lives," said the 27-year-old officer, who recently received a letter from Betty Ford commending him on his work. "They can't even walk nut their doors. they can't even visit friends within their same building. That's how ridiculous it is. Can you imagine a life style like that?"

No Moral Standards

Officer Croce said he thought most of the attacks on the elderly were com-mitted by "young people whn have no moral standards whatsoever."

"They know that if they're under 16, they'll only go to Family Court and be right out on the streets again," he continued. "They generally have no father, so they look up to the pimp on the corner or the drug dealer. And they have absolutely no fear. If you talk back to them, they'll kill you just as at least once. Morris Leff, however, is considered somewhat special: The baldish 80-year-old man was mugged three times-in one week. "The worst time was the last time, in my building," Mr. Left recalled. "He says, 'Come on in,' but I suspected something funny, so I went back out to the street like the police say you're supposed to do. Well, he followed me out on the street and took out a knife and took all my money, about $9. It was in broad daylight.

"I'm frightened all the time now," said the elderly man, who lost part of his hearing after one of the muggings. "I won't go up to my apartment unless the super takes me. And I'm looking for a new place around Moshoin or Petham Parkway. They tell me those neighborhoods are still safe."

Ann Lieberman, 87, is one elderly crime victim whn plans to stay put, even though she is the only white person living in her huilding in a high-crime, low-income housing project on Washington Avenue She water only end Washington Avenue. She pays only $26 a month rent for ber one-bedroom apartment, and she knows she could not find anything that cheap anywhere else.

in her own apartment. The nnly time she leaves it is on Monday mornings, when a make friend from a nearby where a mare then not a market, where they both buy their week's groceries. The man, who refused to give his name, carries a knife and a cane for protection on those weekly trips.

"Oh, I have things to keep me busy," Mrs. Lieberman said evenly. "I read, and I like to watch television, especial-ly Henry Fonda movies. I used to go to the senior citizens' center, hut I don't anymore, because some kids started following me. Once they tried to give me a dead cat."

Mrs. Lieherman, a gray-haired, sparrow-like woman, was the victim of three "push-in" robberies, meaning that the criminals waited for her in the hallway and then pushed her into her apartment as she was unlocking the door. This is one of the most common crimes against the elderly.

"Young criminals also call these rohberies 'crib jobs,'" Detective Sullivan said, "because it's like taking candy from a baby-these little nld ladies can't fight back."

"None of them hurt me very badly," Mrs. Llehermao said softly. "Thay said they wanted money and jewelry, and 1 gave them all I had, including my late hushand's watch. I'll never forget one of them's face-his eyes were wide open and rolling at me. I see it some-

The Conflict With Nyquist

Ouster Debate Rooted In Roles and Ideology

By LEONARD BUDER

The recent demand by most members of the New York State Board of Regents for the resignation of Ewald B. Nyquist, the State Education Commissioner, is, in many respects, a conflict rooted in a dispute over their respective roles. But the issue bere has been ex-

Analysis accept and between a board that Analysis has become increasingly conservative and more politicized in recent years and a Commissioner whose liberal views on racial integration and other issues have alienated many Regents and political officials.

The board majority's loss of confidence in Mr. Nyquist reflected a feeling that the frequently outspoken and seemingly independent Commissioner was not carrying out the will, and was perhaps even usurping the functions, of the policymaking board.

One Regent said privately that the Commissioner, by his interpretations of board policy, was actually changing that policy. Other members have asserted that the Commissioner wanted a board that would rubber-stamp his recommendations. They said he would often bring important matters to the board at the very last minute so there would be insufficient time for a thorough discussion.

important matters to the board at the very last minute so there would be insufficient time for a thorough discussion. "We have a new breed of Regents now," one member said recently. "We ask questions, we want to make our own decisions, and we feel that the Commissioner serves at the pleasure of the Regents and not the other way around."

No Public Comment

Mr. Nyquist, who was taken aback by last week's call for his resignation, has not commented publicly on the informal criticisms of him that have arisen. The matter will come up when the Regents and the Commissioner meet privately next week. At that time, Mr. Nyquist has indicated, he will say whether he intends to resign. At that time, too, an effort may be made by supporters of Mr. Nyquist to gather additional votes for the Commissioner.

While members of the hoard have been nursing their dissatisfactions, Mr. Nyquist, who has been Commissioner since 1969, is reported to have felt that the board was oversteeping its policy-making role and intruding into his domain.

That domain is enormous. One of Mr. Nyquist's most persistent critics, John S. Dyson, the State Commerce Commissioner, refers to Mr. Nyquist as a "king" presiding over "the last kingdom in America."

As the chief executive officer of the Regents (who have the power to discharge the Commissioner), Mr. Nyquist has jurisdiction over all educational institixions in the state — from nursery schools to graduate centers, both public and private—as well as licensing, regulatory and disciplinary powers over all professions hut law.

Not Subject to Review

In addition, the Commissioner has a quasi-judicial role, and his rulings on educational matters brought to him are not subject to review by the Regents. It is chiefly these rulings in a number of school-integration cases that have displeased some Regents who felt the Commissioner had gone beyond board policy. These rulings also bitterly antagonized many members of the State Legislature and other officials.

and other officials. Supporters of Mr. Nyquist, however, say that it is not the Commissioner but many of the Regents, especially some who were appointed hy the Legislature in recent years, who bave departed from the Regents' forward-looking positions on school integration, including the use of busing. One Regent not among those seeking Mr. Nyquist's removal said the board had become an politicized that it nuw resembles "a minor subcommittee of the Legislature."

b) Last spring the Regents, with 10 of the 15 members concurring, backed an unsuccessful bill that whild have given the bhard power the review the Chmmissioner's quasi-judicial decisions to make sure that these conformed to board policy. Mr. Nyquist made no secret of bis displeasure at the mnve by the board. Last week's call for Mr. Nyquist's departure was also endnrsed by 10 members, nine of whom backed the judicial-review hill.

Given the widening schism, it seemed only a matter of time before the situation reached the critical point. This current attack on Mr. Nyquist and his stewardship of the state's education system by the Commerce Commissioner, which were quickly endorsed by Governor Carey, apparently was the last straw.

Waste and Inefficiency Charged

Many members of the board were concerned that the attack portended an attempt by the state to reduce funds for education. Mr. Dysnn has accused the state's education system of being wasteful and inefficient.

But the Regents, more than anything, feared that the stage was being sct for an attempt by the state administration and the Legislature in curn the authority and responsibilities of the board and the State Education Department.

Over the years, for example the trustees of the State University have struggled to free that system from the controls of the Regents. And two years ago the student-financial-aid section, a major function, was taken away from the Education Department and made a part of the new State Higher Education Services Corporation.

To prevent further inroads, many Regents believe, there must he greater costeffectiveness, accuuntability and conrdination in the state education operation. Many Regents are also reported to feel that Mr. Nyquist has not shown an ability to provide the leadershin required for "the management of decline."

Mr. Nyquist will have his say when he meets with the board next week. At that time, as one Regent put it recently, there should be "a shootout at the O.K. Corral."

OTTE LENYA is something of a treasure of the musical theater, and today an exhibition, "Kurt Weill-Lotte Lenya," opens at the Library and Museum of the Performing Arts at Lincoln Center. Nonetheless, Miss Lenye, whom people call Lenya, has a talent for the present, as well as a sense of the past. "All those actors and actresses who say, 'I'm 53!" 'I'm 65!' and then think it's an achievement I think they act like 106." she said. Lenya, who was in her apartment, smoking many cigareties, and working on a Scotch and soda, said she was

Alexis Minotis Plays Oedipus in His Autumn

and a second s

By NICHOLAS GAGE

C4

"I have lived too long, but I have lived a conscious life; that is the important thing."

The speaker is Alexis Minotis, the pre-eminent actor of Greece, musing upon his 70 years, most of which have been single-mindedly devoted to interpreting the classics of the stage in the Greek language—not only the ancient Greek dramatists, but Shakespeare, Brecht, Strindberg, Ibsen and O'Neill as well.

"In Greece, where people flock to see the great tragedies as part of their living culture, Alexis Minotis is an iostitution," says Elia Kazan, the director and writer. "Last July, I watched a performance of 'Oedipus at Coloous' in Epidaurus, and after he finished, the Prime Minister (Coostantine Caramanlis), who was in the audience, went down to the stage, grabbed Alexis in a bear hug and kissed him."

(iii) who was in the authence, well down to the stage, grabbed Alexis in a bear hug and kissed him." " Mr. Minotis is now in New York as general director of the Nstional Theater of Greece and star of the company's productioo of Sopbocles' "Oedipus at Coloous" in Greek, which can be seen at the City Center 55th Street Theater on Sunday eveoing. The company, will also present Aristophanes' comedy "The Knights" tonight and tomorrow night and in matinees tomorrow and Sunday.

Will Also Lecture Tomorrow

The company is touring the Uoited States for the first time in 24 years as part of Greece's cootribution to the Bicentennial. Whils here, Mr. Minotis will also lecture oo the revival of Greek drama at 7 P.M. tomorrow at the Cornell University Medical School Auditorium, 1300 York Avenue, at 69th Street, under the auspices of the American Society of Neo-Hellenic Studies.

Mr. Minotis, who is internationally known for his portrayal of Oedipus the King, plays the aged Oedipus, 20 years after his blinding, as he prepares to die. The play, considered by many to be Sophocles' greatest work, was written in the playwright's 91st year and, according to Mr. Minotis, is sutobiographical in many ways. "I am not playing only Oedipus; I am playing Sophocles. I have spent 70 years preparing to play 'Oedipus at Colonus.'"

Mr. Minotis, who speaks a resonsnt, almost unaccented Eoglish, believes that "Oedipus at Colonus," which he has preseoted successfully in balf a dozen countries, has a message that makes it as meaningful today as it was 2,400 years ago. "Oedipus" fate is symbolically the fate of every human being," he says. "While man may be helpless in cootrolling what happens to him, withio himself he can choose to live honestly and to die with dignity. Oedipus blinded himself so that be could open the eyes of his soul to the trutb.

"Today, men are most interested not in how to live a good life but in how to make a good living; no one thinks about dying. But living is one thing; how to make a death is another. 'Oedipus at Colonus' bas a happy ending.

Alexis Minotis, director of the National Theater of Greece, plays the title role in "Oedipus at Colonus" at the City Center "I have spent 70 years preparing" hecause Oedipus accepts death on his own terms. He pursued the truth no matter where it led bim and endured nobly the suffering it brought hlm."

Mr. Minotis's own life, which began in Crete in 1906, is an odyssey filled with more drama and adventure than aoy of the Hollywood thrillers he acted in while stranded by World War II outside of Greece. He bas evolved from the rebellious soo of a Cretan merchant a pillar of the Greek theater and the busband of a famous actress. As a soldiers he was captured by the Germans twice and escaped twice. As an actor he weot from an internationally acclaimed Hamlet to a bit player in Hollywood epics before be could return to Greek classical drama. And during his years to exile from Greece he traveled, worked and sympathized with such frieods as William Faulkner, Eugeoe O'Nell, Elia Kazan and Alfred Hitchcock.

One of 10 childreo of a fabric merchant of Crete, Mr. Miootis decided to become an actor at the age of 12, wheo he saw his first play, performed by a traveling company. After be finlshed military service in 1925, he didn't return to Crete but joined a theater company in Atheos.

"My family thought that going into the theater was like going into prostitution, bot the theater saved my life," he says. "I had a teodeocy toward selfdestruction, but theater was a disciplice for me. It was a kind of religioo. like going to a monastery oo Mouot Atbos."

It was during his first years in the theater that Mr. Miootis met the woman with whom he would spend the next 40 years—Katina Paxinou, considered the finest actress io Greece uotil ber death almost four years ago, and particularly known in this country for her Academy Award-winning performance as Pilar in "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Mr. Minotis met Miss Paxinou when she came backstage one night to see a friend of hers who was in the same company. "She never took an acting lesson in her life," Mr. Minotis recalls, "but she had the voice, so mature! She was full of poetry. After her, nobody can play Electra."

Mr. Minotis and Miss Paxinou were accepted as part of the newly created National Tbeater of Greece, under the directorship of Photos Politis. "He gave the classic theater meaning," says Mr. Minotis. "He told us that theatrical art is to express the human soul Theater is not to please the audience, bot to make them understand, to elevate them."

Played Hamlet in London

The Greek National Theater traveled to London in 1939, when in addition to playing Oedipus, Mr. Minotis decided to present "Hamlet" in Greek. "Everyone thought we were mad . . to play "Hamlet" in London in Greek!" he laughs. "They said it was too presumptuous. The Greek diplomats tool me to encounce that I was too ill to play Hamlet; but I told them that if I didn't play it, I would say to the press it was because they didn't abow me to."

His portrayal of Hamlet, "stirring and fresh" as one critic called it, received worldwide attention.

Mr. Minotis and Miss Paxinou did not marry until 1940, 12 years after their first meeting, when the outbreak of war threatened to separate them.

"She was going to Loodoo to play in 'Hedda Gabler,' and I was to go there soon after to play Shylock in English," says Mr. Minotis. "But we dacided to marry just in case we were separated. Before that, we had not had time to marry; we worked day and night in tha theater."

With the battle of Dunkirk, their fears were realized, and Miss Paxinou in London and Mr. Miootis in Greece lost all contact with each other for two years. After setting out for the United States on a ship that was torpedoed and then spending 18 bours in tha ocean, Miss Paxinou finally found a place on a flight to New York. Mr. Minotis's eventual escape was

Mr. Minotis's eventual escape was even more dramatic; after beiog twice captured by the Germaos in Greece, he finally escaped to Izmir, Turkey, and made his way to Cairo, where the exiled King George II gave him a visa as a royal courier to the Uoited States.

When he arrived in New York and was met by his wife, Mr. Minotis learned that after two years they were to be separated agaio the next morning. She had to leave at 7 A.M. for Hollywood, where she was going to do a screentest for a movie. "I thought she was mad," be says. "I couldn't go because I had to work in New York for the Greek War Relief. The next morning I found myself alone again." The film Miss Paxinou was to test for was "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

ing I found myself alone again." The film Miss Paxinou was to test for was "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Eventually, Mr. Minotis was able to join his wife in Hollywood. "Katina was a great success there, gstting $5,000 a week." he says, "but we bolh considered those Hollywood years a great waste of time, keepiog us away from our real work."

While his wife was becoming wellknown in Hollywood, Mr. Minotis, along with many European actors displaced by the war, scrambled for small movie parts. The first film role he ever did was the butler in Alfred Hitchcock's "Notorious."

An Encounter With Hitchcock

"I found myself standing in a line with 600 other European actors who had accents," he smiles. "As you came up to the table, you were asked your name, nationality, height and last film credit. When I replied I was Greek and Tips on Tickets.

'Hsmlet.'

"'Stop!' Hitchcock shouted to' the casting directors. 'Give this guy some gravy!' And after that for 11 weeks he had $1,000 a week sent to me, whether I worked or oot."

Later, Mr. Minotis became close friends with several Americans whose work he had admired, including Faulkner and O'Neill, both of whom he knew at the end of their lives. He first met Faulkner when the novelist was iovolved lo writing the script for Howard Hawks's "The Land of the Pharaohs."

"I was summoned to Rome by Hawks because, he said, William Faulkoer had seeo me in New York in a production of 'Oedipus' and told Hawks I was the only actor alive who knew how to wesr a tunic. He wanted me to play the high priest, and I didn't want to do it, but I couldn't turn down a chance to meet the great William Faulkner. I became almost the last friend he made."

O'Neill, too, became a close friend of Mr. Minotis and his wife, aod one

Pop Music: Cate Broth

Ernie and Earl Cate have been playing rock music for a decade, now, but most of that time was spent as a highclass bar baod in their native Arkansas. More recently they've been on the road as part of a quartet called the Cate Brothers. A year and s half ago they did a tour with Queen, in one of booking's more curious pairings. At that time they sounded like a slightly younger version of the band. Ernie Cate's voice was reminiscent of Levon Helm, and in fact it turned out that not only was the Cate Brothers' drummer. Terry Cagle, a nephew of Mr. Helm, but that Mr. Helm himself had played drums off and on with the group in the past.

Wednesday oight, the Cate Brothers opened a two-day run at the Bottom Line, and they didn't sound as much like the Band this time around. It seems they've had a single on the charts for most of this year called "Union Man," and it's gotten surprising support from night in O'Neill's New, over the strong of wife, Carlotta the two of them the last work, the autohio Day's Journey Into Ni Neill's death Mr. Minoti inou translated the plait in Greece, with Miss Mrs. Tyrone.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1976

WOULD RATHER bave one minute at this age than a month at 21," said William Holden, who was Hollywood's earnestly grinning boy-next-door until he weathered into the tough cynic of "Sunset Boulevard," "Stalag 17" and "Bridge on the River Kwai." Beginning Sunday, at the Sutton Theater, he can be seen as the decidedly mature, slightly dissipated husband and father who philanders with Faye Dunaway in "Network." The film, written by Paddy Chayefsky and directed by Sidney Lumet, is a tragicomic grenade aimed at the television industry, a sweeping indictment of behind-the-scene manipulators whom the film bolds responsible for the creation of an entire generation of apathetic, brainwashed blobs. At breakfast a few days ago, Mr. Holden nibbled on a piece of toast, chain-smoked, reflected on television and movies and on how it feels to be going on 59, "Aging is an inevitable process," be said, his blue eyes alert in a thickly fleshed, still handsome face. "I surely wouldn't want to grow younger. The older you become, the more you know; your bank account of knowledge is much richer. In 'Network' I'm described as a craggy, middle-age man, and I can't deny the truth of that. It's not an undue description.

Despite Mr. Holden's belief that his role in "Network" is the most rewarding assignment he has had in years, be does not share Paddy Chayefsky's whole-sale condemnation of television's news coverage. "I can remember nights when the networks came through with footage showing the tragedy ol Danang, with the blood of civilians flowing in the streets, and they did it right now. But you have to take a lot of pap, too; a naked woman riding a bicycle in Central Park is considered red-bot newa on television.'

There are only snippets of nudity in "Network." Yet the scene in which tha singleminded Miss Dun-away, as a young, predatory executive, makes love to Mr. Holden while prattling passionately of ratings to Mr. Holden while practing passionately of latings and sitcoms would have stunned audiences back in 1939, when the wholesomely sby actor became an overoight star in "Golden Boy." "In general, I don't care for scenes of copulation," he said, lighting another cigarette. "Certain functions of the human body are bloody private. But that particular scene was a confirmation of the weirdness of Diana's character, and it was sad, funny-sad. It was a valid scene and I think it is important that creative storytellers bave the freedom to express themselves. When we made 'The Moon Is Blue,' we couldn't get a seal of approval because we used the words 'virgin' and seduced'. "

Mr. Holden is an urbane businessman with residences in Palm Springs, Geneva and Kenya, He is also the divorced father of three grown sons and, like Max Schumacher in "Network," he projects the image of a decent but weary man of the modern world. "I'm a pretty fair interpreter of a certain kind of contemporary character," he said. "I'm not a classic actor, dealing in tragedy. Most actors bave a specific corridor, and within the limits of that corridor they travel the course of their career. I would not put on the beard Charlton Heston wears, or the wigs or the toga. That's not my bag. "For me, acting is not an all-consuming thing, except for the moment when I am actually doing it. There is a point beyond acting, a point where living becomes important. When you're making a movie. you get up in the morning and you put on a clock; you create emotions within yourself, send gastric juices rushing up against the lining of your stomach. It has to be manufactured."

Turning on the gastric juices was never more of a strain than in "The Towering Inferno." "I was just somebody pointing out that there were fire extinguishers on the wall. Faye Dunaway and I were talking about that movie not long ago, recalling how we sat across the table from each other, our eyes glazing over as we mouthed a lot of expository diagazing over as we monthed a lot of capositily that logue. Then, when they edited the film, they decided they didn't need all that talk, that it was just slowing down whet people bad come to see—the big disaster. "I like to get into a situation that is real, where I can say, 'Here is a chance to react as a human heing not some woundant doll or mont that goes being, not some wound-np doll or robot that goes round, and round a track, or a cardboard cut-out like the character I played in "The Towering Inferno." Everyone knows the star of that movie was a burning building."

. It's time for a Tuesday Weld comeback. Miss Weld, a vivacious teen-age tease in such forgotten films of the 50's as "Rock, Rock, Rock" and "Rally Round the Flag, Boys," later attracted a fervent cult through the sensitive work in such offbeat movies as "Soldier in the Rain," "The Cincinnati Kid," "Lord Love a Duck," "Pretty Poison," "I Walk the Line" and "A Safe Place." By 1972, she had blossomed into a critics' darling: yet, after giving a compelling per-formance as the emotionally unhinged heroine of "Play It As It Lays," she vanished from the screen.

Worshipers of Miss Weld will be relieved to hear that she is about to surface again. She bas been signed by the producer Freddie Fields to play the promiscuous sister of Diane Keaton in Richard Brooks's adaptation of "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," Judith Rossner's best seller, about a lonely schoolteacher who is brutally murdered by a man she meets in a singles bar. The question is, where has Miss Weld been all this time?

"Let's see," Miss Weld began in a coast-to-coast telephone interview, "I must have been doing something for the past four years. I know I dld a couple cf television shows and, oh yes-of course-I got pregnant, and married, and had a baby. That took a couple of months." Does she answer to the title of I these days?

"I've been doing that stuff they call rock-and-roll all along," he said. "I was doing it in Kansas City at the Sunset Club, back in the 1930's. Where did I learn it? Well, I picked up the words from different singers at bouse-rent parties, fish fries. There were country people around, singing those slo-o-ow blues, hnt I wanted to put that rhythm to it. Nobody sang the blues with rhythm like that before me. And now they call it rock-and-roll."

Mr. Turner is at the Cookery (OR 4-4450) for four weeks appearing at 8:30, 10:30 and 11:45, tonight, tomorrow and Sunday evenings. No door charge but there is a $3.50 minimum. charge but there is a $3.50 minimum. Mr. Turoer, who is not to be confused with the mythical four song but of the early 1900's nor with the stride pianist who also bears his name, was born in Kansas City in 1911, and by 1925 he was already singing the blues. If the melodies and byrics of Mr. Turner's hlues came from the country bluesmen, and from stand-up blues artists such as Bessie Smith, his rhythm came from Kansas City jazz, from the blues-drenched instrumental milieu which produced Bennie Moten with his "Moten Swing," Count Basie with bis "One O'Clock Jump," and Lester Young with bis "Lester Leaps In." In 1938, the Joe Turoer-Peter Johnson recording of "Roll 'Em Pete" joined this list of Kansas City masterpieces. That same year, the record producer and impresario Jobn Hammond brought Mr. Turner and Mr. Johnson to New York to perform in the historic Spiritu-als to Swing concert at Carnegie Hall. Encouraged in part by Mr. Hammond's success, a young would-be entre-preneur from New Jersey, Barney Josephson, opened bis Cafe Society Club. There a growing fad for boogie woogle,

Mr. Turner made some of his favorite recordings, including collaborations with the piano virtuoso Art Tatun, and joined Duke Ellington's show "Jump For Joy" in Los Angeles, but the next few years were relatively lean until one fateful evening at the Apollo theater in Harlem.

A scene from Rainer Werner Fassbinder's "Beware of the Holy Whore"

Film: 'A Child Is a Wild Young Thing'

By RICHARD EDER

HERE are television commercials that take perfectly lovely shots of children running across fields, all tangled up in light. But we aren't moved. The intention cancels the beauty.

Peter Skinner's "A Child Is a Wild Young Thing" is often quite beautiful to look at. Considering it is his first movie-he wrote, directed, produced and photographed it-it is made with some skill. But it is a dreadful and wrongheaded vision of its subject, a wrenched picture of childhood.

Set on a Brittany island, the movie centers upon Adam, a curly haired 2-year-old. Ostensihly - the level of reality shifts somewhat at the end-it is a record made hy the narrator, a psychologist who is Adam's father, of the child and the child's mother.

To be exact, the form isn't precisely narration. As the camera shows Adam moving about, playing, eating, crying, prancing, and the mother and three teen-age girls who have come along as vacation haby sitters, what we hear is

It is the psychologist and his wife tearing at each other. She resents his project, bis cold and hidden stance hehind the camera in an effort to try out theses about animal behavior on his son. Beyond that, she appears to resent his position as a male, his domination, his philandering. For his part, he is jealous of her total absorption in the child, ber insistence on letting him run around naked and do whatever be pleases, her continual fondling and nuzzling of him.

At one point, the mother lies maked on the beach and holds Adam on top of her in a posture of simulated intercourse. It is not especially shocking, hut it isn't healthily natural, either. It is, simply, inappropriate: One more instance of the film's projecting adult ideas of childhood onto this child. The language of the parents is stilted and exaggerated. They hurl clichés about child development at each other.

Each filmed sequence of Adam calls up a stream of the most hanal and irritating comment. Occasionally-in one of the film's most depressing deviceswhat are presumed to be Adam's thoughts are rendered by songs.

In some sense, it seems to be an attempt at psychodrama-real or fictional or a mixture of both-to try to purge the tensions between husband and wife. At one point, Adam is repre-sented as dying, and one of the movie's genuinely charming bits comes when he refuses to stay out of camera range and is seen skipping about at his own "funeral."

But what ultimately is least real in this movie is what should be most real: the child himself. He is an instrument, an occasion for the interminable acrimony of the parents.

The comera virtually never leaves him, and the movie virtually never thinks of him. Children are not meant to be watched so persistently, so intensely. If they are, they are not seen. They change, they act up, they are distorted by the eye and thoughts of the person who watches them. The only way to look at children is with peripheral vision. Music: Cleveland Quartet Begins Beethoven Cycle

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

The 16th Beethoven quartets are in effect the calling card of any important string quartet. Credentials are immediately established. Last night m Tuily Hall, the Cleveland Quartet gave the first concert of their Beethoven cycle, choosing a representative work from each period—the B flat Quartet (Op. 18, No. 6), the F major (Op. 59, No. 1) and the A minor (Op. 132). This is not the first time the Cleveland Quartet has engaged the complete Beethoven series. And of conrse it will not be the last. As string quartets go, the Cleveland is a youthful group, only seven years old and there is going to be plenty of Beethoven in its future. Young it may be, but very few string quartets have had the kind of polish that the Cleveland Quartet brings to music. Theirs may not be gutsy play-ing, but it is incredibly smooth and supple.

It almost automatically follows, therefore, that such knotty and arduous works as the A minor Quartet CLEVELANO DUARTET: Donaid Wollerstein and Poter Sulat. volinits. Marting Strongin Katr. violist: Pari Katz. cellus: Al Aflor Tolly Hall. String Quartets N5 6 in B flat (On. 18. No. 6). No. 7 in F 109, 53. No. 13 and No. 15 in A minor (Op. 127) would be less in its style than the Opus 16 or Opus 59 sets of Beethoven quartets. The B flat Quartet of Opus 18 received a slender, graceful, jeweled performance.

Three Quartets

There was constant forward movement, plus an evocation of the Haydnesque source of the music. This was joyous, beautifully etched playing. Because of the length of the program, the Cleveland Quartet elected to drop the first-movement repeats. A few years ago, at Hunter College, those repeats were included.

For the F major Quartet, the first of the three "Rasumovsky" Quartets, the Clevelanders used a more rugged quality of sound, as befits this more rugged music. The stress, however, was on elegance, purity of tone, unanimity of ensemble. Others bring a sturdier quality to this score. The Cleveland Quar-tet approach last night was primarily One peculiarity of this group is its sound in the lower strings. Paul Katz, the cellist, has perfect intonation, a fine bow arm and superb musicianship. But he produces a rather light sound. Often his cello has more the characteristics of a viola than the dark-hued instrument it is in other strnig quartets. Thus the Cleveland Quartet has a lighter sound than most other groups.

There were a few problems in the A minor Quartet. It was heautifully played, but the interpretation was lightweight-and this has nothing to do with sound per se. There were sections in the slow movement where the play-ers seemed to be fishing around, waiting for something to happen. The notes themselves came clearly through, but with little organization. Elsewhere the playing was fine-grained, sensitive and much better organized. But the Cleveland Quartet as yet has to take the full measure of this giant of the chamber music literature. That these fine players eventually will be a foregone conclusion.

Journeys Behind the Scenes At the Metropolitan Opera

By JENNIFER DUNNING

Alice would have felt at home backstage at the Metropolitan Opera House. And even the most jaded opera buff is likely to have the feeling of falling down the rabbit hole into a fantasy world on the Metropolitan. Opera Guild's tour of the house. With the opera seasoo under way, this weekend may be tha time to take the plunge.

Tours are conducted most weekday afternoons at 3:45 and Saturdays at 10:30 A.M. and last approximately an hour and three-quarters. Itinerary and pace are left to each of 30 or so trained. volunteer guides and depend, to soma extent, on the nature and interests of each group. Most of the guides are unabashed opera fans and have a fund of anecdotes to tell along the way. Groups may find themselves led by a moonlighting surgeon or a production assistant for a television soap opera. Helen Corbett has been coming down from her home in Chappaqua, N.Y. to lead tours for five years now. Her sense of humor and slightly irreverent affection for every aspect of the sol-emn Met remain infectious.

A typical tour starts at the ticket gate, where the ordinary operagoer enters for performances, fighting his or her way through the crowds. But the house is quiet now. Mrs. Corbett takes off at a gallop for the interior stage door right.

Cement Block and Worn Carpet

Through the door, and "you're down to cement block and nice worn carpet," Mrs. Corbett sings out, "It's very formal Mrs. Corpert sings out, "It's very formal here, though. In the old house you went up and down steps and had to crawl through funny places." Into a padded elevator and up to the third floor, through an open door marked "Keep Locked," the group stumbles into the electrical shop. The Met makes all its own equipment and everything seen 00 stage except artificial flowers seen oo stage except artificial flowers, shoes, gloves and hats, and maintains them with prosaic appliances like steam irons and vacuum cleaners. In ooe corner, however, past a cryptic hlack-board message about "Sat mat lites," is a device Wotan might have wished for. In a filing cabinet are neatly iodexed projection slides for special light-ing effects. Drawer labels read "ghost Tour Information The Metropolitan Opera Guild backstage tour of the Metropolitan Opera House at Lincoln Ceoter will be given today at 3:45, tomorrow at 10:30. Tickets are $4 for adults ($3 for Opera Guild members), $1.50 for studeots. Reservations must be made in advance by calling 582-7500.

rides," "rain of fire" and "Rheingold cloud."

In the nearby prop shop, weapons are made, and the processional staffs for "Aida" might be glimpsed amid the trees, warriors' shields and a distant blossoming bower. A shelf nearby holds Cleopatra's pitcher, a hand, miscellaneous antlers and an eagle, a Stradivarius violin, several skulls and the scythe that cuts the mistletoe in "Norma." all in plaster. "I would defy you to know what is real and what is not real on stage," Mrs. Corbett says triumphantly. Ghost Ride, Witch's Stove

In another area permeated with a sweet glue smell, the black ghost-ride horse from "Les Troyens" hangs suspended in midair over the witch's stove from "Hansel and Gretel." Two glass fiher statues that witness Eva and Walther's first meeting in "Die Meistersinger" now lie on their backs staring peacefully up at the ceiling. In the antiquing section, rehearsal music punctu-ated by nearly inaudible comments from the cooductor James Levine, piped in throughout the backstage area, mixes with rock music from a workman's transistor radio. Then it's on to the fifth-floor paint and scenery shops, where costumes are bloodied, dirtied and given picturesque holes or plastic jewels cut from mass-molded sheets like giant egg crates. Several yards away, workmen put the finishing touches to a heavy duck vari-colored floor covering for "Esclar-monde." Here coverings are made that may end up as dirt, brick, wooden or marble floors. Nearby, the material for a cyclorama is laid out oo a floor that looks the size of a soccer field. A man . in paint-splattered jeans wanders casually across its sky colors. A "Loheogrin" flat leans against one wall, and in a corner a paint-mixing station is crowded with giant tubs of paint and bamhoo brushes four feet long, so workmen can stand up as they paint.

Back to the elevator, which is now inhabited by a nervous René Kollo, a tenor who has lost his way to his "Lohengrin" rehearsal. In the fourthfloor carpenter shop behind-the-scenes equipment is stored, from dollies to the "Alda" grandstand and a mysterious large wooden object labeled "Escape Act II." In another, high-ceiling room large pieces of scenery are built. Ropes, iron latticework, blocks and tackles and pulleys hang down, and a cherry-picker ladder stands in the corner. "A ship was built here ooce that was higger than the Santa Maria," Mrs. Corbett says proudly.

And then onto the narrow, paintspattered bridge that runs between skeletal frames holding backdrops, three stories above stage level. Here, working from pictures propped on music stands, workmen are abla to paint giant backdrops as they are raised and lowered on frames. Tour members should note the cartoons, decorous graffiti and scribbled instructions that adom the cinder-block walls.

On the second floor, the tour enters its most glamorous phase, the world of the singers. Shouldering past racks of costumes that line tha corridors and peering into the small rehearsal rooms aloog the way, ooe may observe James Morris and Nedda Casei vocalizing. while in another room a coach growls sympathetically as Pilar Lorenger sails through an aria.

Byzantine Boys, Saracen Prisoners Chorus costumes are hung together, pinned with labels reading "10 Byzantine Boys," "18 Saracen Prisooers" and "4 Virgins." In the costume room, a seamstress sews a fringe of hair oo a hat. Rich dresses hang on a nearby rack, neatly marked with the singers' names. There is a regal brown rohe from "Aida" marked "Arroyo," Marilyn Horne's Amneris cloak and a hrocade cloak marked "Caballé #1."

In the wig room, three women sit making the wigs and bairpieces used by the Met. Walther's golden tresses hang near a lustrous fall of hlack hair belonging to Alda, but most of the wigs are kept in hoxes labeled with singers' names. The wigs are made from human hair except for white wigs, which are made from yak fur. Fake noses, fingernails and ears are available from the makeup department next door, where faces are adorned with scars and warts.

In the photo department, tour members are treated to a slide show, for here fare stored photographic records of Met productions. At the end of the corridor, Morley Meredith peers around a corner as stealthily as Mephistopheles, and Mignon Dunn races for an elevator, scarves flying behiod her like a gypsy. In "C" level hasement, tour members may wander through a labyrinth of hrighly colored, full-orchestra-size rehearsal rooms—complete with hallet barres and gaggles of kettle drums— and into cavernous storage rooms. In the dim light, a stolid Nuremberg home the nim light, a schole Autenmerg rome towers over a frivolous pink window front from "Marriage of Figaro." Ob-scure shapes labeled "Hell" and "Dead —Rosen" lie in a dark corner, and high stairways and pinnacles vault up joto the shadows.

This weekend may be the time to take the plunge and explore the other side of the curtain at the Met Opera House through one of its many tours

At stage level, passing the dispensary, the group might peer in oo Gene

Farther on, Mrs. Corbett allows a furtive glance through an opeo dressiog room, with its handwoven Peruvian rug, chalse longue, piano and workmanlike makeup boxes. Bottles of baby oil and ace-tone (for removing whiskers) stand beside the dressing-table basins. A small, white-haired man whisks by carrying a silk jacket. "That's Joho Casamassa, legendary den father to singers," Mrs. Corbett whispers. "He knows them all. He was an apprectice

ITH "THE PRETENDERS," Jackson Browne has probably made his finest record. It will almost definitely be greeted as a masterpiece hy those who love singer-songwriters in general and Mr. Browne especially. Yet to this listener, it seems ultimately dis-appointing, as if now that we've seen what Mr. Browne can really do, it iso't quite enough.

C16

Jackson Browne was prized by the in crowd as the secret king of Los Angeles soft-rock poets even before his first Asylum record came out. His records have spread his fame to a growing cult. But there were problems: The soogs sounded too much the same, the singing wasn't all that confident, and the production buried everything in sonic murk.

Apart from several worthy songs, it is the produc-tion that is most refreshing about "The Pretender." Jon Landau hasn't imposed some alien style on Mr. Browne's music; this is still recognizably a Los An-Browne's music; this is still recognizably a Los An-geles record. But he has lighteoed, varied and clari-fied the textures in a refreshing way. The playing has a crisp hite to it that never falls into sameness. and there are continual touches in the arrangements that betoken an imaginative spirit. Some people blamed Mr. Landau for the thick textures of Bruce Springsteen's "Born to Run" album, but "The Preteoder" suggests he can adapt his style to tha artist. But it simply isn't enough. Mr. Browne is dealing with extensioos of the same themes and the same imagery he has used in the past, the tope is more despairing than ever, with the same picture of a thwarted idealist, too listless eveo to effect an escape from a world that wastes his soul. Rivers still flow to the sea, towers still crumble, and Mr. Browne still pursues his hopeless quest for an inner peace that cao be binted at, illusorily, through love.

These are poetic ideas that evoke an enormous sympathy in many people. But for this listener, for ell the skills of Mr. Browne and Mr. Laodau, the end effect is self-pitying and repetitious. Whine, whine, whine,

If the complaints could be traosformed by artistry, it might all make sense. But Mr. Browne's musical imagination is not so fecued as his poetry. Worse, his voice is no less limited bere than it has always beeo, and thus the centerpiece of all the production cleverness remains dull and unevocative. "The Pretender" sounds like the most lovingly prepared demo in the history of the record business.

Still, the record grows on one, which is always a good sign. And the length of a pop record is just about the right dosage of Jackson Browne; the longer concerts can be a real trial. Mr. Browne's admirers will prize this record despite whet anyone else says. But for this observer "The Preteoder" coofirms that Mr. Browne's gifts, while deep, are simply too oarrow for lasting satisfaction.

And then we have Lou Reed, who will be at the Palledium tonight and tomorrow. Mr. Reed bas always heen his own men, but oow that he's signed to Arista, it's interesting to speculete on the joteractioo between him and Clive Davis, the self-styled hit maker who is Arista's president.

Mr. Reed has always been torn between a desire for artsiness end outrage on the one hand and com-

For those poteotial huyers still nervous ebout Mr. Reed's disk-long ooslaught of electronic noise. "Metal Machine Music," let them be assured that "Rock and Roll Heart" is a real, rocking Lou Reed record. Theinstrumentals are tight and punchy, and Mr. Reed's vocals, tuneless and tooeless as ever, are still erticulated with liveliness. Given the fact that nobody, including Mr. Davis, really knows what will be a hit, one can at jeast concede that there are several potential singles here.

But et the beginning of the second side's third song, which is called "Vicious Circle," we suddenly have the "other" Lou Reed. The voice shifts abruptly forward, with Mr. Reed's mumhling directly ioto the listener's ear instead of buried back with the saxophone. This is the rept, ominous, arty Lou Reed, aod it makes one realize what's been missiog up to then

Well, not missing entirely, the earlier songs on the album have their fresh twists, too. But the last three songs are more persuasive, as if Mr. Reed. hed paid his debts to Mr. Davis or his own commercial demons and felt that he could finally do his thing. As ever, Mr. Reed is about as interesting e creature as rock has spawned, and his allure hasn't dimmed yet.

New York City and rock-and-roll have had a generally-uneasy relationship. On Wednesday, Mayor and Mrs. Beame were hosts to a luncheon for the Bee Gees in a tent next to Gracie Mansion, attended by an assoriment of jet-set celebrities, music execu-tives and members of the press.

The occasion was the Bee Gees's decision to donate the net profits from their Dec. 2 Madisoo Square Garden concert to the Police Athletic League (a fig-ure estimated at between $10,000 and $35,000). In additioo, the group's mansger, Robert Stigwood, paid for the luncheon (costs estimated at $10,000 to $15,-000), all the while assuring reporters that those costs weren't going to be deducted from the poten-tial gift to the city. The Bee Gees naturally garnered unblicity from the unter with the presentation of publicity from the venture, with the presentation of their latest gold records at the bands of the Mayor, dutifully documented by a horde of rock photographers.

But all that is window dressing next to the real relationship between the city and rock, whose heart is the beleaguered Schaefer Music Festival to Central Park. For years now environmentalists and residents around the southeastern corner of the park have fought against the concerts, and Roo Delsener, the promoter, and his alles have fought for them. A year ego it looked as if the 1976 coocerts wouldn't take place, but then the city's budget crisis postponed plans to restore the Wollman Rink, where the concerts are held. The rink restoration was to be part of a general refurbishing of southeastern Central Park that would have iocluded banishing the coocerts.

Late last summer, Mr. Delsener says, he received assurances from the city that he could come back in 1977, assuming he cut down on hard rock—which, he says, he agreed to do. Now, however, the city has received $1.2 million in Federal funds to restore the rink-which it must first metch dollar for dollar. The matching can come from any mixture of state, city or private money.

Mr. Delsener says he was told recently by the Parks and Recrestion Commissioner, Martin Lang. that the 1977 coocerts were definitely off. Mr. Lang says the matter is still undecided, and Mayor Beame, questioned at Wednesday's luncheon, seid the same.

Mr. Delsener argues that, apart from the artistic and social value of the festival, the city stands to gain from it financially—New York received $162,000 from Schaefer last summer, and paid out far less than thet for extra police security. Unless the city reconsiders, he may move the concerts to Nassau County or New Jersey: oo other site within the five horoughs is suitable, he argues. Mr. Delsener suggests that Commissioner Leng thinks he will be unable to raise his metching funds from New York's wealthy unless he can assure them the park will be free of roving teen-agers.

Mr. Lang says that the fund raising and the design of the new rink would prohebly not be completed until next fell. But he denies that either the park's southeastern corner or potential fund raising would be confined to wealthy residents of that area.

"I happen to be obsessed with the physical preser-vation of the park," Mr. Lang said. "There's nothing more transient than last week's rock concert."

The Sounds of Balala ToVibrate at Tully

By ROBERT SHERMAN

When the 22 performing members of the Balalaika and Domra Society convene on stage st Alice Tully Hall convene on stage at Ance ruly rule tomorrow light at 8, it will be with fierce pride in their past, and not a little apprehension about their future. Costs are rising, good halalaika and domra players are hard to come hy, and the society's treasury is down to the point where a full bouse is as much a financial necessity as an artistic morale-booster.

-Still, the astonishing richness of tona that is the hallmark of Russian Tolk orchestras has won many converts here over the years, and sold-out concerts have been the society's rule in recent seasons. This time, the program will feature dances by the Volga Ensemble and songs by Ludmila Mishmaevskaya, a recent émigré from the Soviet Union, who will be making her American debut, and Claudia Curtis, but the lioo's share of the work will fall to the players who coax such marvelous diversity of sound from their seemingly primitive three-stringed instruments.

Balalaikas and domras both come in families, as any Russian peasant can tell you, the largest members, which are tha lowest in tone, are so big that they have to be rested on the floor and played standing up, like the dou-ble-bass. They, differ in shape—the domra rather like a long-necked lute, the halalalka proud of its unique status. as the ooly triangular stringed instru-meot in the world. They also differ in the manoer of producing the sound: the balalaika is plucked by the finger-tips. the domra strummed with a pick or plectrum.

Weekend Gardening: Indoor Tomatoes

By RICHARD W. LANGER

This is the beginning of the plastic tomato season. Perhaps no other fruit or vegetable symbolizes so well the simultaneous rise and fall of modern agriculture as does the semisynthetic pale pink little ball sold four to a plastic tray at the local supermarket under that uninviting cuphemism "hard-ripe." Modern agriculture has de-signed a highly productive tomato vine whose fruit picks well, stores well, ships well-and tastes terrible.

The tomato, although used as food by the American Indian for centuries before its introduction to Europe, was initially grown on the Contineot only as an ornamental plant with reputed medicinal powers—powers not many were anxious to test, since it was widely believed that tomatoes were poisonous.

Even with this negative image, the fruit was soon being called the ponume d'amour, or love apple. The story goes that a Moor from Morocco visiting Spain was attracted to the plant and took some seeds back to Tangier. Later, an Italian spilor spinor the neart in an Italian sailor, seeing the plant in Morocco, followed suit and brought the plant home, where it acquired the sobri-quet pomo dei mori, the Moor's apple. From Italy the plant made its way to France, and knowing the French, it comes as no surprise that pomo dei mori was soon slurred into something a little more like pomme d'amour.

With that change in oomenclature the fruit's reputed medicinal properties became more specific. As an aphrodisiac more and more people were willing to take a tasty chance on it, and the tomato cult was soon on its way in Europe

In the United States it took a little longer. Even as late as 1900 the tomato was still considered poisonous by many Americans. Educators such as George Washington Carver, in an attempt to convince people of the tomato's outri-tional value, would thrill assembled multitudes by actually devouring one before their very eyes. Today, of course, the tomato in varised forms is unbiquitous m ous proce our diet, with tomato juice, ketchup or sauce consumed oo an almost davy basis by vast numbers of people. Where things have come full circle, however, is in the fresh, unprocessed fruit itselt. Except for the garden variety cultivated by homeowners in summer, it is almost inedible. And so the purely dec-orative function of the tomato has been restored; tomato slices are now a close second to the parsley garnisb oo the dinner plate in the constant race to the garbage pail.

But there is hope. If you want a sweet juicy tomato just dribbling with taste, grow your own-starting now. All you need is some rich potting soil, pots and a few seeds. Don't let the lack of a sunny warm windowsill deter yoo either. Tomatoes are very amenable to growing under lights. If you have such a thing as a spare close, with proper lighting you can even grow your salad there.

The best tomatoes for indoor culti-vation are the so-called cherry types. Although these are diminutive, they are also productive. I've had a single Tiny Tim yield over four of those little plot baskets of sweet tasty fruit in the course of its season. The major problem is that one really needs several of the plants if one wants to use the tomatoes for salad, since otherwise the fruit is nibbled away as it ripens-the mention the taste.

Miniature tomatoes seem to do best in pots of 7 inches or larger, although they can be grown in smaller ones. The pots themselves may be plastic or clay or wood, with a wide range of choices in between. On the whole I've found the traditional porous clay pots best. But plastic has one thing going for it: you have to water the plants less, which means that going away for weekends of three or even four days presents no probléms.

The soil in the pots can be of various compositions, but not straight from the garden. Garden soil is usually too the garden, Garden sour is useday be beavy and packs down too much for potted plants unless you add at least 25 to 50 percent peat or sphagnum moss, varmiculite, or perlite. Also you'll want to stir in a couple of tablespoons-ful of ground limestone and a cupful of dried manure for each pot. An easier way to arrive at a good mix is to go out and buy some bagged sterilized potting soil. To this you'll merely have to add the manure and limestone. At the same time, since the soil has been sterilized, you doo't have to worry about that bane of indoor gardeners, damping off. This fungus disease strikes young seedlings shortly after they emerge from the soil. One day you have the lovely atems with a couple of incipient leaves budding from the top; the following day you have nothing but shriveled sprouts. want to stir in a couple of tablespoons shriveled sprouts

Plant three or four seeds to a pot, tucking them just below soil level and watering well to settle them in. Set the pot in a warm location; tomatoes like a temperature of at least 70 degrees and preferably 75 degrees. When they aprout, thin the plants out so that they are two to a pot. At this point you want to make sure they're getting plenty of light, either 4 to 5 hours of direct sunlight or 14 or more bours under a double fluorescent light fixture using special spectrum-balanced tubes such as the Duro-Lite Natur-escent or the Verilux TruBloom. In the case of fluorescents, a bank of four 40-watt bulbs just a few inches above the plant tops is the most efficient arrangement for growing your vegetables.

Ooce the tomato plants are growing, the only routine maintenance called for, besides fertilizing occasionally, is making sure the soil never dries oot. Water heavily enough so that excess runs out the drainage bole in the bottom of the pot. This ensures that the roots will grow all the way down in the pot. With temptation is just too great, not to central heating being as dry as it is, chances are you will have to water the plants every two days or so. As soon as the soil feels dry just below the surface, it's time to douse it again.

Every two weeks you should fertilize the tomato plants as you're watering them. Natural-fish emulsion and bonemeal-rich fertilizers are excellent. In meal-rich fertilizers are excellent. In any case you want a fertilizer with a high middle number like 5-10-5. Fruit production takes a lot of nourish-ment from the soil, and although you will get tomatoes without using fer-tilizer, it will be a small crop.

tilizer, it will be a small crop. Without pollioation, however, you won't get any tomatoes at all. The birds and the breeze account for this outdoors. If they are lacking in your house come tomato-blossom time, shake each plant daily while in bloom to ensure pollination and fruit set.

to ensure pollinatioo and fruit set. Now, tomatoes alooe do oot a salad make. Thao again, there's lots of edible greenery suitable for indoor cultivation. Lettuce, for instance, can be grown ooe bead to a five-inch pot. Unlike the tomatoes, please oote, it should be kept in a cool spot. It also requires less light, and so can be successfully cultivated on that cool north window-sill. A high water coo-sumer lettuce is best grown in plastic sumer, lettuce is best grown in plastic pots. Otherwise its care is the same as for that of tomatoes.

The most foolproof indoor (or, for that matter, outdoor) crop is radiabes. Because they take little more than three weeks to mature, they are also a perfect children's crop. Like letture, they need cool weather. Otherwise, they make few demands. Now with a minivegetable garden neatly lined up in pots, how about compting having down from about something hanging down from above? Something like cucumbers. Grown in a hanging basket, cucumber vines such as Patio Pink or Midget can be allowed to trail down the side of the windowto the floor if you wish. Sun and cool temperature requirements make cu-cumbers ideal for growing close to the window in winter. Plenty of fertilizer is an absolute must.

Doo't be afraid to experiment fur-ther. Eggplant, spinach, figs and even strawberries bave been successfully grown iodoors. All of which doesn't mean ooe can really start a truck garden in the house. But it is possible to grow enough vegetables to supplement the wioter larder-and oh, that taste, savored more than ever in the barrer

Art of Russian Stage Design Is Shown

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

"Stage Designs and the Russian Avant-Garde (1911-1929)," the very fine exhibition that runs through tomorrow in the main gallery of the Library of the Performing Arts at Lincoln Center, recalls Serge Diaghilev's dinner-table judgment on these first Russian manifestations of modern art.

The time was 1913, the scene was a hotel dining room in Paris between

"Twenty schools spring up in a month," Diaghilev said. "Futurism, Cubism-that is ancient history, prehistory. In three days, one is already a philistine. Mototism dethrones Automatism, to be superseded by Trepidationism and Vibrism, which soon goes out of existence because of the emergence of Planism, Serenism, Exacerbism, Omnipotism and Nothingism."

A Pioneer in Movements

Natalia Goocharova was the best known of these painters and she was "a very great artist," Diaghilev said, adding that she walked about Moscow

So much for Paris's being ahead of Moscow in 1913. As for Goncharova, she did in fact, paint ber face and she was a great artist. After 1914, she be-came one of Diaghiley's chief designers. Like many of the artists represented in this show, she was a piooeer in the "isms" to which Diaghilev referred, both mockingly and respectfully. And reflected in this exhibition is the excitement that stemmed from the wealth of experimeots in Russian art that assumed the names of Cubo-Futurism, Rayonism, Suprematism and Constructivism. These movements found their initial expression in easel art. Yet as this exhibition confirms many of the artists involved found a perfectly equivalent creative outlet in stage design. Interest in early 20th-century Rus-sian stage design is high, but it has tended to focus on such artists as Léoo Bakst and Alexandre Benois, who founded the "World of Art" movement with Diaghilev in 1898. The library's exhibition, however, deals with the successors to the "World of Art"-the modernists whose ultimate rejection of representational art evolved into nonobjective and abstract art. Among the artists represented in the

127 designs drawn from the collection the source. of Mr. and Mrs. Nikita Lobanov-Ros-tovsky are Kasimir Malevich. Ivan Puni, Vladimir Tatlin, Mikhail Lationov, El Lissitsky, Pavel Tchelitchew, Alexandra Exter and Goncharova. An indispensable guide to their philosophical underpinnings (to compensate for the exhibition's inadequate labels) is the latest volume in Viking's "Documents of 20th-Century Art" series, "Russian Art of the Avante-Garde," an anthology edited by John Bowit, who has also written the introduction to the exhi-

Ballet: Dutch National in Three by Three

By CLIVE BARNES

The second program of the Dutch National Ballet arrived at the Minskoff Theater last night and, as with the first, it offered a sampler of the company's three choreographic directors, Rudi van antzig, the troupe's artistic director, Hans van Manen and Toer van Schavk.

This Dutch company is fascinating, if only because it is so unexpected. Most oational companies are very safe and play secure. The Dutch do not. They are perfectly prepared to be outrageous, and do not care if they outrageous, and do not care if they out-rage. This program opened with Mr. van Dantzig's "Gioastera," a work first given in Rotterdam this summer. Set to Alberto Ginastera's Secood String Quartet, it is a plotless work that haa some of the energy and abstracted passion of George Balanchine'a "Four Temperaments." It is an exciting work full of richly contrasted choreography that shows Mr. van Dantzig in a more classical mood than is his custom. There is an energy to Mr. van Dant-

There is an energy to Mr. van Dantzig's choreography, expressed as simply as a surge across the stage, that is always pleasing. Here this was specifically expressed by the eight male dancers in the first movemen tof the ballet, sweeping through the work with a specially gentle authority.

Mr. van Dantzzig is concerned with what John Updike would simply call "couples." The ballet is full of relationships, changing, switching and emerging. Yet like Mr. Ginastera's music, its introspection is finally lifeassertive. What is particularly important is that the ballet flows with the music and is exultantly danced. These Dutch move through classic ballet as if it were a discothèque.

Hans van Manen's "Adagio Hammerhas been seen here before, klavier" danced by the Pennsylvania Ballet, and is about to me mounted on Britain's Royal Ballet for Natalia Makarova and David Wall. Understandably. It is a rich and gorgeous work, full of ecstasy and surprists. The leading roles here were taken by the company's leading dancers, Alexandra Radius and Han Ebbelaar. Both of them were superb moving with n easy elegance, and yet matching the ruggedness of the Bee-thoven music with their own unstressed passion.

It is fascinating the way Mr. van Manen takes on Beethoven. This is by no means an abstract treatment of the Opus 106 adagio. The choreographer uses the music to describe a whole landscape of relationships between men and women, and yet these relationships are never stressed, never emphasized.

In some of its emotional overtones the ballet has a lot jo common with Mr. van Dantzig's "Ginastere," yet the moods here are a great deal more dramatic. This is one of Mr. van Manen's best works, and Mr. van Manen happens to be one of Europe's finest choreographers.

Mr. van Schayk is the company's wry, dry humorist. His ballet "Before, during and after the party" has con-temporary but nostalgic music by Gilius van Bergeyk with the addition of what is described as Rusian piano music. The ballet is meant as "an evocation of a world awaitiog the day of doom." and as you would expect it is humorous in a lighthearted, deadly way.

Mr. van Schavk is the most overtly classical of the company's trio of choreographers, but probably the least flueot. His works go on, and on, with more feeling thao sustenance. He is, however, an unusually gifted designer. The company is a strong one, and its refreshingly irreverent approach to classic ballet is extraordinarily welcome. National ballets can be prissily stuffy. The Dutch National Ballet is as free as the wind-yet still has that particular authority becoming to a troupe that represents its country.

The Goal Was Form

bition's catalogue,

Yet any layman will have no trouble singling out the exhibition's salient fea-tures. The first is that generally, these set and costume designs (some were for films, music balls and the circus) were created for nonrealistic productions. Form, oot illusion, was the goal and the strong coloristic sense used to create these forms is one of the joys of this show

The second aspect is that the de-signs — the actual drawings, collages, prints, watercolors—are true works ot art. Usually, a stage design is an instruction. Yet because these artists did oot merely translate their easel art concepts loto theater designs but worked out many of their basic principles in the theater, the distinction between easel art and stage design becomes minimized.

This is especially true of the Constructivists, who dominate the show. It is significant that the posters here for several of Vsevolod Meyerhold's most famous theatrical productions list Varvara Stepanova and Liubov Popova not as "decorator" but as "constructor." In the designs of Exter, with their ramps and figures in motion, the sense of volume and space that 10-formed all her work makes superfluous any formal distinction between her art within and outside of the theater.

Admission is free to the exhibition, which is organized by the International Exhibitions Foundatioo. The library is open from open to 6 P.M.

Stage: O'Neill's Forgotten 'Dynamo' Recalled

YNAMO is one of Engene O'Neill's forgotten plays. It opened on Broadway in 1929, the year after "Strange Interlude," and lasted only 50 performances. George Ferencz's revival at the Impossible Ragtime Theater is the first New York production in 47 years.

The play is overwrought, the dia-iogne thunderstruck; "Dynamo" seems as if it were conceived in a fever. It is an ambitious attempt to come to terms with what O'Neill described as "the sickness of today," the "death of an old god," the religion of his ancestors and the failure of the new god of science and materialism, as represented by the dynamo. Reuben Light, the hero of "Dynamo," the son of an evangelical minister, turns against his father and embraces the dynamo as earth mother. "O great dark mother!" he exclaims. "That's what life is!"

Though that expression seems simpleminded as well as exclamatory, "Dyrelationship to other plays by O'Neill. In Reuben we see a representation of the author himself and the minister is a shattered mirror image of the playwright's father. The three women are archetypal O'Neill characters; the abstracted mother, the young woman who radiates sensuality, the older ma-

Actually it is the production more than the play that holds our attention.

As he did last year with "The Hairy Ape" (a much more substantial drama), Mr. Ferencz attacks the work as a oew play, stresses its strengths and does not ignore its weaknesses. If lesser plays by great playwrights are to be seen, then Mr. Ferencz's productions could serve as models. In this case, the approach is expressionistic. We are not asked to believe these characters as people but to approach them

Everything is a study in contrast. The conflict between religion and science is exemplified by the Rev. Mr. Light and the engineer Fife, the first rigid and dogmatic, the second base and malevolent. The open stage is squared off into two bouses: at a wooden table the Lights live by candlelight and kerosene; the plastic-andchrome Fifes live by, and worship, electricity.

In the beginning Reuben is shy and childish, Dressed in knickers, Ray Wise, who last year was an intense, animalist-ic Yank in "The Hairy Ape," is almost unrecognizable. But io the second act, returning home from the sea, he is bursting with confidence, experience and cynicism. Reuben is so transformed as to seem schizophrenic.

Ada Fife (originally played on Broad-way by Claudette Colbert) is no simple flapper next door, but sex-on-the-line, and Shellev Wynant plays her with a Karen Black-like sensuality and feroc-ity. The couple's second-act sexual encounter begins as a wrestling match. with Ada tossing Reuben over her shoulder. Mr. Ferencz is not afraid of a laugh, if it helps make his point. The scene is grotesquely comic.

The dynamo, itself, is depicted imaginatively, with screens of mesh, pulsating sound and flashing light. Mr. Ferencz strips the play to essentials, meets it head-on (even the melodrama), fuses the actors and makes "Dynamo" throb with renewed energy.

Concerts of the kind for which Town Hall was once famous are not entirely missing. Julian Bream, the gultarist, still plays there, Maureen Forrester, the contraito, will return tonight, exactly 20 years after her debut there, to sing the identical program. Several distin-guished lieder and chamber-music coocerts have been booked.

Mr. Bream's loyalty to Town Hall is based on its acoustics and atmosphere. "Oce of the problems with the lute," he says, "and to some extent with the guitar, is the need for intimacy. For the gintar, is the need for intimacy. For the size of the auditorium, It's the most intimate I know of. The seating ar-rangement gives a sense of playing in home-like surroundings, and this is a valuable asset. The acoustics lend a bloom to the sound of plucked strings. I think it is one of the greatest halls there is."

Although it is owned and operated by N.Y.U. and gets supportive services from it, Town Hall is operated inde-peodently, with Jesse C. Reese as executive director, and it has its own based of directors board of directors.

Mr. Reese, the executive director, is himself confident of Town Hall's fu-ture. He says that although it may take some years, even decades, the physical some years, even decades, the physical surroundings will change. Old buildings will be torn down and new ones erect-ed. A whole new audience will be avail-able for developing. And it is for this future that Sunday's gala is being held. Ironically, Town Hall was oot origi-nally meant to be a music ceoter. It was an outgrowth of the League for Political Education, founded in 1894 hy six New York women who had been active to women's suffrage and who active lo women's suffrage and who thought that the ability to vote intelligently required continuing adult education. Courses and lectures were given first in rented halls and from 1921 on in Town Hall.

Some notables who spoke there were Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wlisoo, Henry James, Thomas Mann, Jan, Mass-ryk, Booker T. Washington, William Butler Yeats, Amy Lowell, Anne O'Hare McCormick, André Maurois, Margaret Bourke-White, William Jennings Bryan, Ellen Terry, Maude Adams, Jane Addams, Rabindranath Tagore, Win-ston Churchill, Joho Galsworthy and Maurice Maeterlinck.

Town Meeting of the Air

Some of the speakers generated more than normal interest. Soon after Town Hall was dedicated, Margaret Sanger was scheduled to lecture on birth control. The police hroke up the meeting and arrested Mrs. Sanger on a charge of disorderly conduct, but members of the audience followed her to the 47th Street police statioo house and successfully demanded her release.

The famous America's Town Meeting of the Air debates were broadcast from Town Hall and flourished in the late 1930's and early 40's, when world crises spawned inflammable subjects. The hall was castigated in some circles in 1929 for allowing a Sacco and Van-zetti memorial gathering. And io 1966, when various iotellectuals gathered there to protest the war in Vietnam, a New York City detective walked on stage, grabbed the microphone and sang "God Bless America" Musical events had their emotiooal splurges, usually of a sympathetic oa-ture. Mad. Ave. Into Fun St.

By JOHN RUSSELL

ROM ITS BEGINNINGS around 57th Street, Madison Avenue is a serious working street. Office is piled upon office, the business suit is mandatory, supplicants cower in waiting rooms, and chairmen of the board glare across desks as big as bil-liard tables. Madison Avenue begins with a thumping great No. 1 (the 50-story Metropolitan Life Insurance Building of 1909) and goes on much like that all the way up to the Fuller Building on the northeast corner of S7th Store It has the Morgan Library Street. It has the Morgan Library at 36th, it has two huge hotels of a miscellaneous sort (the Biltmore and the Roosevelt), it has the prettiest girls in town (in and out of the Vogue Building at No. 350), it has that best Building at No. 350). It has that best irriend of the watchless, the clock at the top of the Newsweek Building, and it has (but for how long?) the Villard Houses at 50th. But fundamentally, it's a heavy, earnest, unsmiling sort of street, where the work of the world interaction and mark of the store gets done and people don't often stop

North of 57th Street

It is with the Fuller Building that the art world begins to take over the avenue. Art is there in the two sculptured male nudes (decently toweled) by Elie Nadelman, which flank the clock bove the S7th Street entrance. More important, inside the building tha galleries are so numerous as to rate a special listing in the lobby. Fifty-seventh special listing in the looby, and so of the street was, of course, the axis of the gallery world for many years, and the galleries to right and left of the Fuller Building can hardly be counted.

For a block or two northward it's duilish going, though I rate Gottfried Brothers, at No. 600, as the best inter-national newsstand in midtown, and there is a likable ambition about the Beaux-Arts statuary above the door of No. 667. The General Motors Building between 58th and S9th, on the west side, is oot a thing of beauty, but it gets marks for trying, with its rock garden and some very accommodating benches. But then between 62d and 63d on the west side, Madison Avenue suddenly turns into what every visitor takes it to be: one of the great fun streets of the world.

What bappens is that there's a row of brownstones, almost intact above shop level. Each one of those brown-stones houses a one-person shop just four long paces wide. The whole rhythm of the street changes when we know that with every few paces we are going to get a diminutive new world: a cherished little space that is going to be defeoded forever and ever against the people who would like to raze it as they have lately razed a whole block on Madisoo lower down (oo the west side).

Of course there are bigger shops on Madison between 62d and 8Sth, just as there are apartment houses that dream of Milan and Verona, very good hotels like the Westbury (at 69th Street) and the Carlyle (76th Street), cburches like the Madison Avenue Pres-byterian (No. 921, where John Weaver directs, week by week, some of the best music to be beard in town), and at 76th on the west side the great fortress of Sotheby Parke Beroet. One of the things that make upper Madison such fun is the disparity of scale, intention and quality. There is no way to summarize or clarify that disparity: It just has to be experienced.

Just beyond the brownstones, for in-stance, is one of the bank buildings that banker after Colonial Williamsburg and don't quite make it. This one, the Bank of New York (No. 706) even has a widow's walk round the top. "Some widow!," we may say to our-selves, noting her unsurpassed view of the Hotel Pierre. But right there in quick succession we have several sanctuaries of the one-person principle: the Cambridge Chemist (No. 702), where we can imagine ourselves in London's Jermyn Street, Knoud the saddler (cashmeres and caps, mallets and a whip or two) at No. 716, and that archetypal independent, G. Elter, the purveyor of seductive ready-made frames at No. 742. A little higher, also oo the west side of the street, Meatique, at No. 756, reminds with its very good takeout food that upper Madison itself is not a great eating ground, though its cross streets have more than one favorite restaurant.

Upstairs on the Avenue

Much that is best on upper Madison Avenue goes on upstairs, often In in-teriors that were budt as family houses and with never a thought of trade. So it's important to keep looking up and across. Not to do that is to risk missing such haunts of pleasure as Krön the Chocolatier (No. 764, upstairs) where Mr. Krön will make you a full-size facsimile of the Farnese Hercules if you ask him nicely and some time in advance.

The east side of upper Madison has intimations of grandeur in the 60's and 570's. The open-plan wine racks at Sherry-Lehman (No. 679) bave been the downfall of many of us. At 65th Street and again at 66th there are Renaissance-style apartment houses, which astound by the perfection of their detailing. S. Wyler (No. 713) is modest enough in outward appearance, but doo't be fooled: This is one of the best shops in the New World for silver.

ES, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1976

ANTIQUES

Single-handed shops come and go oo upper Madison, where a volatile public is quick to scent failure and to pass by on the other side. One of the great successes of recent times is the Madi-son Avenue Bookshop (No. 833, just above 69th). Arthur Loeb and Rodney Pelter have parlayed themselves into a very strong position indeed with this store, which often turns into the kind of saloo in which Stendhal would have felt at home. (Watch Mr. Pelter, though: A demon salesman, he will send you away with "Betrothal Patterns in 14th-Century Brabant" or "The Collected Papers of Grover Cleveland" when all you wanted was the new Ar-thur Hailey.) As you stagger out with your parcels, don't forget that at Nn. 829 is the Surrey Liquor Store, which may well be the best liquor atore in town for those who know their way town for those who know their way about the wine list.

Art With a Capital 'A'

But art with a capital "A" remains the mainstay of upper Madison Avenue, and people who bave their eyes open for significant trends set great store by the inauguration in 1966 of the Whitney Museum at Madison Avenue and 74th. The Whitney Museum had begun way downtown oearly 50 years ago, moved up into the 50's in 1954 as the Museum of Modern Art's neighbor, and eventually got itself the grim new building by Marcel Breuer that is its present headquarters. The Breuer building is nicely judged in relation to its neighbors, for all that its slanting windows and Kafkaesque elevators strike a certain chill joto senior visitors.

The juxtaposition of the Whitney Museum and Sotheby Parke Bernet seemed at one time to have clinched the supremacy of upper Madison in the art world. But that world is a jumpy, unbiddable sort of place; and as to Madison Avenue, S7th Street and SoHo, it would be difficult to say which has the edge. Leo Castelli is leaving upper Madison for good, Monique Knowltoo bas left SoHo for 19 East 71st Street,

Publishing: Seeing Freud's Place in Vienna

By THOMAS LASK

N 1938. SHORTLY AFTER THE Nazis overran Austria in what they called the Apchluss, or union influential friends of Sigmund Freud in other countries were working for his safe passage to England. He finally survived the war and were sent to Dr. Anna Freud in Britain, who turned them over to Mr. Engelman.

About two years ago, Mr. Engelman though the time was about right to do something with them. He observed among his wife's large collection of books on mental bealth that many had been published by Basic Books. Off went a letter; in return Mr. Engelmao received one from Erwin A. Glikes, president of Basic, saying he was interested, and why didn't Mr. Engelman come by with the pictures. He did, and Mr. Glikes was so taken that he promised to publish them aod insisted on "handshake contract" right then and there. It was the publisher, too, who arranged for an introductory essay by Peter Gay and Informative captions by Rita Ransohoff, and it was he who had Mr. Engelman supply a memoir of bis own.

ldea is to allow you to do better than you bave done. Mr. Anderson, who has played a few hands, says bis aim is to present "a total strategy" for play-ing blackjack. Patricia Fox Sheinwold's "Husbands and Other Men I've Played With" (Houghton Miffiln) tours the bridge world from Saturday-night social encounters to national tournaments. Oflen enough. Mrs. Sheinwold has found that the game became a psychological background. That may assuage the ego sometimes, but it is not always good for your partner. Jack Ludwig's The Great American Spectaculars" (Doubleday), a not unaffectionate look at American revelry, includes chapters on the Kentucky Derby, the Indianapolis 500 and other occasions that don't

As for the novel, "it was the hit of an otherwise soggy weekend," said a reader who managed to snag the galleys.

just below 79th Street, and the house is the former Rhinelander Waldo mansion, built by Kimball Thompson in 1898.

Auctions apart, the charm of upper Madison lies in the one-to-one exchanges in little shops where you must first ring the bell to be admitted. Some people find this spooky; others find that it sets up an atmosphere of privilege and complicity, which adds ro-mance to even the bluntest inquiry. In the 60's and 70's on Madison you can find musical boxes at Rita Ford Inc. (No. 812), rare scientific instruments at Philip W. Pfeifer (No. 900), toy soldiers at the Soldier Shop (No. 1013), first-rate porcelain at S. Berges (No. 880), caviar at Fraser, Morris & Company (No. 872), 19th-century and 20th-century Americana at Ann Phillips Antiques (No. 899), fine English furniture at Devenish & Company (No. 929) and at No. 999 another very good book-store, the Nine Ninety Nine Bookshop. And the art galleries? They are there in force: some of them wonderful, some Indifferent, some frankly gruesome. An address on Madisoo Avenue means nothing, in this cootext and a good deal of licensed prowling has to go on before we come to our own concluslons. Once again, ao extreme disparity leaps to the eye. One-person stationers may be across the way from antiquaires where you are into four figures before you get inside the door; and when you are all done with Indiao miniatures, posters from turo-of-theceotury Vienna, paintings hy Miltoo Avery and original drawings by Charles Addams, you can restore yourself by a visit to William Greenberg Desserts Inc. at No. 817, where the smell of the pies, tarts and other temptations will make you tear up the calory chart and break down the door.

(Gourmet Liquor Stores, diversify the climb. Burlin between 81st and .82d is hole-in-the-wall store where care, and, at No. 1064, El a food store with a bi somewhere inside it. If you books, Lucien Goldschmidt will remind you of the very on the Rue de Seine in the Banakh Gallery (No. serves a toot for its effort of those Soviet artists wh out of the Soviet Union and how to be nursed through

One of the things that make upper Madison Avenue such fun is the disparity of scale, intention and quality and Terry Dintenfass and Jill Koroblee have left upper Madison for S7th Street. It's a trend-watcher's nightmare, this subject, and I'm oot going to be drawn into it. Upper Madison is not consistently either fasbionable or expensive—there would be no contest, for instance, if it were set beside the Via Tornabuoni in Florence-but there is oo doubt that you can spend a fortune to great advantage in the 60's and 70's. Sotheby Parke Bernet at the height of the sea-son runs the bazaars of Istanbul to a close finish as to which is the more beguiling. Christie's of London does not as yet bold sales in New York (though it plans to begin them oext spring), but a formal call at Christie's headquarters will give you a glimpse of the kind of town house that Edith Wharton knew. It is at 867 Madisoo Avenue, made the journey in June 1938. But in May of that year a friend of Freud's suggested to Edmund En-gelman, a 31 - year - old engineer and photograph buff, that a pictorial record ought to be made of the offices and living quarters where Freud and his family lived for 47 years and where psychoanalysis was born. Despite the hazards, Mr. Engelman agreed to do the job.

Almost 40 years later, the photo-graphic results will see the light of day, when Basic Books brings out "Berg-gasse 19" on Nov. 16. The title is Freud's address. The book is a fascinat-ing series of pictures of what appears to be every inch of the interior of Freud's offices and guarters. Individual photographs had occasionally been pubished before ("everyone wanted to see the couch Freud used"), but not the series.

Mr. Engelman, who left Austria abortly after Freud and settled in the United States, said the other day that photographing the Freud place was no casual romp. "It is difficult to describe the feel-ing of terror or helplessness for us in Vienna at that time. The Gestapo was watching Freud's house carefully. Using floodlights or flashbulbs was out of the question, and lenses and film were not so sensitive as they hecame later. I developed the films myself at night. In retrospect, I get the shivers." It would have been dangerous to at-

It would have been dangerous to at-tempt to leave the country with the negatives, so they were left behind with a friend. Mr. Engelman took witb him only an inscribed photo of Freud. "If they saw it, they might think it was my grandfather." The negatives

The pictures, which are full of superb and revealing detail, evoke the middle-class taste of the time, but psychologists are likely to read more into them. For example, Freud was a considerable collector of antiquities, and one British curator has termed the collection the most valuable in private hands. What is interesting is that though these opjects crowd the offices, not one is to be seen in the living rooms, which are dotted with Dresden china and cut giass.

The Freud apartment in Vienna is now a museum. The furniture, the books, the art objects are in London. Would it be possible to reconstruct the rooms from the photographs?

"Absolutely," Mr. Engelman said.

It may not be a trend, but some of the fever of state lotteries, offtrack net-ting, Las Vegas nights and approved casino gambling seems to be rubbing off on current books. "Turning the Tables on Las Vegas" (Vanguard) is Ian Anderson's vade mecum to the mechanics and psychology of playing blackjack, poker and a couple of other games of chance. The

79th Street Frontier

Seventy-ninth Street marks a funda-mental frontier in upper Madison. Something of the whiff of ostentatious well-being drops away (except at Miss Grimble's, where the classic cheese-cakes are hard to beat). We become conscious of each shop as an entity in its own right. We notice that the avenue's slight upward gradient continues, so that we are approaching the highest point of Manhattan Island. T IS TOO EASY to laugh at "The Sorcerer of Belinas Reef," which may be seen es the afterbirth of Charles Reich's best-selling "The Greening of America." Like that book, this one is incredibly-his favorite word-"green," which is to say naive, simplistic and sentimental. The language alone is enough to set your teeth on edge. In his doctrinaire emotionalism, Mr. Reich reminds me of a scene in a fine old Gerard Philippe movie. Mr. Philippe plays a half-hearted gigolo whu is attempting to exploit a "soulful" young Englishwoman acted by Joan Greenwood. It is one of her peculiarities that she insiste on corresting his face Greenwood. It is one of her peculiaritics that she unsists on caressing his face against the grain, from the chin up to the forehead, pulling his features out of shape in the process. Mr. Reich's lan-guage and his ideas are rather like that. He means to be "soulful," but the ef-fect is often abrasive. Some people will be tempted to call "The Sorcerer of Bolinas Reef" a brave book, because Mr. Reich confesses all of his insecurities in it, including the

of his insecurities in it, including the fact that he was a virgin in his early 40's, then an exclusive homosexual, then a bisexual, However, before praising the author's "courage" and "hon-esty" in laying barc his soul and psyche, one must remember that nothing is easier or more popular today than to confess to deviations from the norm. Mr. Reich is a snug member of a large company of what we may call heroes of inversion-an inversion that is not simply sexual, but also includes a number of other categories that resist description except in the author's terms, such as "new consciousness," "authenticity," "open," as against "closed," and so on.

There is no question about Mr. Reich's sincerity. He is so very sincere, in fact, that "The Secret of Bolinas Reef" might work best as a folk opera, set to the sort of mournful country music that is produced by young people born aod bred in citles. The book is a cri do coeur by a man who sees the entire population as heart patients. Wheo, at some point in his life, Mr. Reich tears his Achilles tendon, America limps along with him. It is fashionable to call this sort of book a "journey," in the sense of a quest, a pursuit of self, a pilgrimage to apotheosis. The story is a natural descendant of the transcontinental Irip of Jack Kerouac and his followers, those attempts to run down awareness on four wheels, to substitute mere mo-Uon, like the futurists in painting and sculpture, for significance, Mr. Reich, too, shuttles between Yale and San Francisco: Wheo he begins to dry up oo the East Coast, he flies to San Francisco and refreshes his Ideas in the cosmic humidor of romantic rain, fog and beach walks.

Mr. Reich began as an idealistic young lawyer io Washington, before he understood that it was not the Government that had to change, but "the peo-ple," that it was not new social legis-lation that would arrest the "dry rol" that was afflictiog America, but "new consciousness." Perbaps it was those years in Washington, Mr. Reich's second childhood, so to speak, that cor-rupted his prose and turned him into a lobbyist of the lost soul, a demagogue of the disenfranchised. After a visit to Berkeley, the author decided to "radi-calize" his classes at Yale. "tu become on entirely new kind of teacher and thereby vastly improve my own life." Considering the "thereby" and the "vastly" in that sentence, I wonder just how december the radionalization of him how deeply his radicalization of himself has reached. Perhaps it is only an occupational psychosis, but the critic clings to the notion that changes in an author's feelings ought to be felt in his language.

In a sense, "The Sorcerer of Bolinas Reef" is only "The Greening of Amer-ica" again, translated into autohiographical terms, Mr. Reich is so profoundly struck with his original epiphany that you might say he has only one book in him. Like a nun repeating her beads, he tells us of our alienation, our ma-nipulation by corporate or capitalist forces, our powerlessness in the grip of a government—elected, presumably, by someone else—that is utterly out of touch with "the people."

Love, connectedness and new awareness-these provide his panacea, "Evolutionary rebellion," he writes, "is a refusal, born of utmost necessity, to continue to believe in things the way they are." The pathetic thing about "The Sorcerer of Bolinas Recf" lics in the fact that Mr. Reich sees overything he thinks and feels as "new." as if no one had ever said all this before. He speaks of discovering "the happy child" in himself—which is acceptable -but he runs into difficulties, or at least I do, when he lets this happy child write his book for him. One feels, too, that his humility is disingenuous-surely he knows what an influence he has on the young in this country. Though he has now experienced sex

-not forgetting lo tell us that il is exciling-Mr. Reich may be said to have retained his virginity as a writer. Somewhere inside this dithyramb, this burst feather pillow of exhortation, there are some useful truths. You might say that they are like the proverblal thin man inside the fat man trying to get out.

Steven Ashley's STALKING BLIND takes you along on a deadly hunt Ihal's probably a little too real. As real as cold sweat. And il's already in a second printing before publication because of advance raves like Ihese:

The body of a young man is found hanging by ils heels in a lonely spot in West Virginia's hill country. Sheriff Cub Hamill must investigale. So begins Ashley's lalest suspense story which, like his 'Caleb Who Is Hotler Than a S2 Pislol, is rich in characler, in suspense and in understanding of country folk ... Cub is a fine creation, dignified, humane and lrue to life, and there are a couple of superb hunting scenes—in which the quarry is not an animal."

Finding the murderers, however, isn't easy; they are a small, ad hoc gang of black urbao terrorists led by a Bobby Seale-Eldridge Cleaver figure named Everett Walker, who plays Svengati to the cold-blooded grease-gun hit man. The most pleasure in Mr. Dalay's novel derives from his rather cynical insights into the bureaucratic intrigues

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

Friday

This week's entry from WNYC on public television's new Documentary Sbowcase is "Waiting for Fidel," a film by Micbael Rubbo produced for the National Film Board of Canada, It can be seen this evening at 8 on Channels 31 and 13. As a record of a failed expedition-a trip to interview Fidel Castro, who never shows up-the film salvages a marvelous portrait of both contemporary Cuba and outside opinions about Cuba,

The interview is sought by three men: Mr. Rubbo, the filmmaker; Joseph R. Smallwood, a self-described social-ist and former Premier of Newfound-land, and Geoff Stirling, a wealthy owner of newspapers and broadcasting interests, who financed the trip. The three men and their craw wait in a three men and their crew wait in a huxurious manaion for the promised meeting.

meeting. They are given tours of Cuban in-stitutions. They debate the merits of Cuban socialism, with Mr. Stirling par-ticularly upset about the "absence of freedom." Finally with tempers flar-ing, they turn on one another, with Mr. Stirling reminding the fillmmaker about who was paying for the tapes and equipment. Freedom is a fragile commodity, even in Mr. Stirling's commodity, even in Mr. Stirling's world, where money obviously helps. This is a fascinating, valuable, some-times very funny and occasionally somewhat sad film about politics, culture and impossible human nature.

"The Boy in the Plastic Bubble," In a baby born with an immunity deficiency grows up in his incubator environment to become Jobn Travolta, who as Barberino in ABC's "Welcome Back, Kotter," has become a passion of the T-sbirt and poster generation. This made-for-TV movie, on ABC tonight at 9, is wholly diamissable, if not con-temptible, except for the sociological iosights it affords into "creators" of television material. In effect, Mr. Travolta, the teen-age idol who is in his mid-20's and already noticeably running to fat, is put on display like a role of paper towels. There he is, pouting in his germ-free plastic environment, and he can't be touched by the pretty and willing girl next door (Glynis O'Connor), much as Barberino can't be touched in the plastic environment of a televisioo set. The excruciating frustration doubtlessly equals immediate identification.

With a decent supporting cast — Ralph Bellamy as the boy's doctor, Robert Reed and Diana Hyland as his parents-the story wends its predictable way from closed-circuit school lessons to a special astronaut-like suit that enables the boy. Tod, to attend high school classes. The plot is sprink-led with manipulations, but none is more startling than its attitude toward age and aging.

The history teacher in the closedcircuit lessons is mocked, although he seems kind and helpful to Tod. "Hey," Tod cutely asks the girls next door, "does Mr. Brewster look as old in person as he does on television?" Mr. Brewster appears to be in his late 40's. Even Tod's self-sacrificing parents must face the righteous scorn of youth: "You guys could use some sunshine yourselves," he tells them cutely, "you're getting to look real old."

Saturday

At 8:30 P.M., Channel 13 presents "Meat," a Frederick Wiseman film, which is always something of an event in itself. This year's entry, produced under a continuing contract with WNET-Channel 13, examines a meat processing and packaging operation in Colorado, combining closeup views of butchering techniques with surveys of the workers and sellers behind the gory but efficient scenes.

At midnight, Public television's "Soundstage" series, produced in Chi-cago, will explore "Woody Guthrié's films. Office is at 250 West 57th

America." The series has undergone personnel changes, most notably the loss of Ken Erlich to, of all things, "Tony Orlando and Dawn," and its sharp musical edge has been noticeably dulled. But this particular installment can claim distinctive assets.

Using photographs and recordings of the folk singer, the hour bas Studs Terkel tracing Guthrie's life from the Oklahoma hills where he was born to. among other places, Los Angeles and the Texas Gulf. On hand to sing several of bis songs are Pete Seeger, Judy Collins, Fred Hellerman and Arlo Guthrie, Woody's son,

Sunday

"Camera Three" continues this week with the second installment of a threepart profile of Philip Johnson, the ar-chitect. The skillful interviewer is Rosamond Bernier. At age 24, Mr. Johnson established the Department of Architecture at the Museum of Modern Art. At 40, be designed his famous "glass bouse" in New Canaan, Conn. And today, at 70, be appears to be aa provocative and testy as ever. He is royally impatient with the profession of architecture. For one thing, he says, 90 percent of today's building doesn't need architects. Mechanical engineers will do. For another, the para-architects-the clients, decorators, social analysts-are "all nibbling away at us." Therefore, declares Mr. Johnson, "only art is important."

In fact, today's segment at 11 A.M. focuses on the sculpture gardeo he built near his glass house in 1970, and Miss Bernier intelligently establishes her view of Mr. Johnson being more sculptor than architect. He is best known as the creator of buildings where nobody lives: Lincoln Center's State Theater or the "Watergarden" in Fort Worth. His homes are testimonials to marvelous design and uneasy living. As Miss Bernier notes, his New York townhouse, for which he designed the interior, is subject to drafts and is "as recalcitrant to clutter as the glass house." Clutter would seem to be a little too human for the art of Mr. Johnson.

The second se

Mr. Johnson, though, is superbly unbending and shrewdly witty. As for the future of architecture, he anticipates cycles of action and reaction, comparing the whole to fashion: "High beels will come back and the ladies will totter down the street again," he says. Miss Bernier has produced an intriguing profile of both Mr. Johnson and his profession.

NBC's "Big Event" this week is "Sybil," which, like last week's "Gone With The Wind," will be presented in two parts, tonight and tomorrow, from 9 to 11 each evening. This television production is based on the best-selling hook by Flora Rheta Schreiber which told the story of a woman possessed by 16 different personalities.

Produced by Jacqueline Babbin and directed by Daniel Petrie, the film be-gins in Central Park with Sybil and another teacher supervising children in an art class. A squeeking swing trig-gers a terrifying memory for Sybil. Abruptly rushing home, she becomes more hysterical, and the viewer bears a variety of voices as the camera exa variety of voices as the camera ex-plores her eperiment. Finally, Sybil breaks a window and cuts her wrist. At the hospital, she is referred to a psychiatrist, Dr. Cornelia Wilbur, and there she begins a year'a long quest to find her "true" self. This evening's half of the production is generally quite successful in captur-ing the frightening unreality of Sybil's world. Mr. Petrie maintains an effec-world. Mr. Petrie maintains an effec-tive tension between the ordinary and tive tension between the ordinary and the grotesque. Fleshbacks and special effects are used cleverly and with re-markable economy. And the perform-ances are geoerally solid. Joanne Woodward remains convincing and sympathetic as the psychiatrist despite the character's tendency to call people "sweetie." And, in perbaps the most surprising revelation of the season, Sally Field is incredibly riveting as Sybil. The former star of "The Flying Nun" and other teenage inanities moves from Svhil through the various personfrom Sybil through the various personalities in a dazzling tour de force.

Palo Alto Area Setting Pace in Circuitry

Special to The New York Times

SUNNYVALE, Calif .-- In the intellec-tual boom towns of Silicon Valley, electronics engineers who want to earn degrees from nearby Stanford University have been able to take courses for credit via live relevision for the last seven years—at a vast saving in com-muting time for themselves and for the high-technology companies that foot the bill.

Although the television system may not have attracted the engineers to the bighly competitive, expansionist cli-mate here originally, it frequently gets credit for holding them here. That is the view of Dataquest Inc., a local analytical firm, which has annual in-tegrated circuit sales nearly equal to the Southwest in overall semiconductor

Flamboyant Salesmanship

In such a climate, alumni of the semiconductor division of the Fairchild Camera and Instrument Corporation, itself still a major manufacturer in this area, have founded or reorganized several companies pioneering in the ultra-miniaturization that can put very large memory units or even tiny computers on silicon chips no bigger than a fingernail.

Among these are the Intel Corpora-tion (with sales pushing toward $200 million), the National Semiconductor Corporation (sales over $300 million), and Advanced Micro Devices Inc. (whose sales arc forecast at about $67 million in the year ending next March). In a climate of flamboyant salesman-

At a tumultuous meeting yesterday of the membership of the New York Stock Exchange, angry floor members spoke out sharply against a proposal to increase the number of available seats.

Member after member rose to shour that the value of their seats, which had already in most cases declined in value from the purchase price, would drop even more if the recommendations of the ac-cess committee of the board of directors were approved. Some charged that the committee was proposing to make cos-metic changes to placate the Securities metic changes to placate the Securities and Exchange commission while ignoring the ioterests of the members who were intimately involved.

The meeting, held in the auditorium of the Chhase Manbattao Bank at 1 Chase Manbattan Plaza after the close of trad-ing, was open only to members, who jammed the room to voice their views. However a oumber of members who at-tended reported afterward what tran-spired during the two-hour session, which was conducted by Karl R. Bendetsen, chairman of the committee and a public director of the exchange.

Among those who spoke in opposition to the proposal were J. Truman Bidwell, a former chairman of the exchange; James J. Maguire of the specialist firm of Henderson Brothers Inc. and a former vice chairman of the American Stock Exchange, and Jack C. Louis of the poweful Big Board specialist firm of Coleman & Compaoy.

Mr. Bidwell, because of his prominence, was invited to speak from the stage where the access committee members were seated. And when Mr. McGuire fin-ished his remarks—In which he promised to devote all his energies to fightiog the plan in question-he received a standing ovation from the audience.

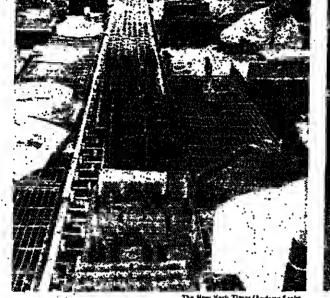

Sugestioo Under Fire

The committee suggestion that drew most of the fire during the afternoon was one empowering the board to authorize additional seats if it felt that such ao action was appropriate. Its other major proposal—establishing annual member-ships for those who pay $13,500 a year for electronic access and $25,000 a year for a physical presence on the floor-was also attacked by unhappy brokers and traders.

The board committee, under pressure from the Securities and Exchange Commission to provide greater access to Big Board facilities by preseot nonmembers, nade the two controversial p an effort to still continuing criticism of what has been termed the "private club" aspects of the exchaoge. The votes on both proposals were understood to be extremely close. Mr. Bendetsen, a former chairman of the Champion International Corporation, explained the committee's rationale for proposing greater access to the floor with equal rights fr all membership categories. He mentioned that his group had at one time considered offering rights to present members but bad rejected this idea because of the tax implications. Belligerent members, on the other band, asked why the committee bad not proposed other means of greater access to the Noor that would oot have an adverse economic effect on current seatholders, Among the subjects they thought should have been included to the report were options trading oo the New York Stock Exchange, the access of foreign banks and the importance of equal rules governiog access to all securities exchanges. Yesterday's overwhelmingly bitter attacks on the committee's proposals were foreshadowed at an informal meeting of members held at the exchange on Mon-

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP) - The United States Export-Import Bank report-ed today that its loan delioquencies jumped sharply last year, but Stephen M. DuBrul Jr., the chairman, said he was confident a more cautious approach would coable the bank to avoid asking Congress for more money. Without that more cautious approach. the bank might have to esk Congress for an injection of tax money in four to six years, Mr. DuBrul said.

The bank fosters exports by United States companies with the help of cutrate loans and loan guarantees by overseas buyers. The bank was created after World War II with $1 billion in Government seed money, and keeps going through Government borrowing and income from loans.

Its annual report showed that net income for the year ended in June increased for the first time in four years, rising $34.1 million to $115.4 million. But at the same time, the Ex-Im Bank

nancial markets and many businessmen continue to manifest concern over the economic recovery and the policies they: expect from the Carter Administration, there is an island of calmness and patience here in the executive suite of one of The Economie the nation's largest business enterprises. This is the cor-porate home of E. I. du Pont Scene de Nemours & Company, the world's biggest diversified chemical producer and one of the largest manufacturers in the United States, with sales this year likely to cross the $8 billion level for the first time.

The head of Du Pont has always been a powerful influeoce in American industry by virtue of the company's vast operations in the industrial chemical, fiber, fabric, photographic, plastic and other fields. But the current occupant of that post, Irving S. Shapiro, is probably a bigger power in that realm since he also heads the Business Roundtable, a blue-ribbon group of some 160 top corporate executives that develops position papers on issues most crucial to busicess.

If one person might be considered the principal spokesman for private business enterprise at this time, it is this 60-year-old lawyer who left the Antitrust Divisioo of the Justice Department 25 years ago for a career with irving S. Shapiro; the powerful chairman of E. L du Pont de Nemours

Du Pont that catapulted him to the top ecbeloo in 1973.

At an interview io his ninth-floor office in the company's headquarters this week, Mr. Shapiro took a confident view on the American economy for 1977 and the decade ahead, as well as a hopeful attitude on the policies that may evolve from the new Adminis-tration in Washington next January. As chairman of the Business Roundtable. Mr. Shapiro aought-and received-an invitation to meet Mr. Carter during the political campaign last September. He wanted the candidate to address the membership of the Roundtable, but, instead, he was asked to go to Atlanta to join a group of 16 other prominent businessmeo, baokers and trade-association officials for a four-hour luncheon meeting with the Democratic contender for the Presideo-

C.B. Radio Glut Hurting E.F. Johnson

Market Place

BY ROBERT METZ

Shares of the E. F. Johnsoo Company, the biggest domestic manufacturer of citizens' band radio equipment, have fallen to 14 from a high of 34 last spring. Wall Street analysts are wondering Minnesota whether this solidly based Minnesota company will suffer further as it and 35 other members of the industry fight for profits in a chaotic market. The Johnson shares were recently transferred from the over-the-couoter market to the New York Stock Exchange. They closed there yesterday at 14%, up ½. The problem for all members of the industry is twofold. First, citizens band radio production is apparently outpacing demand by a considerable amount, and second, the Federal Communications Commission decision to open new channels to citizens' band radio users-40 channels compared with the present 23-has brought coo-fusion and heavy discounting to the market

Since the 40-channel units cannot be sold until Jan. 1, the Christmas season is expected to be a difficult one. Meanwhile, discounting of basic 23-channel units recently dropped the retail price below $40, further disappointing qual-ity producers such as Johnson, whose average set retailed at $160 last year. •

Some persons believe that the future will be clouded by a flood of Japanese imports. In past such waves, sales of domestic black and white television sets, colored sets, calculators, and elec-tronic watches have plummeted.

On that score, the most discouraging news is a comparison of F.C.C. citizens' band radio license applications and Japanese citizens' band radio production. The high was set last March at 561,000 license applications. By September, the figure was down to 329,000 applications

By JOHN H. ALLAN

Meanwhile, the Japanese produced 1.76 million sets in July, 1.39 million sets in August and 1.55 million sets in September, according to the Japanese Trade Ministry,

While it is clear that there are other markets for the equipment besides the United States, this country is by far the largest user. And, of course, there is production from Taiwan, South Korea and the United States itself to figure into the equation.

In that supply-demand context, it is little wonder that leading companies, including Johnson, posted losses for the third quarter. For example, Pathcom Inc. receatly reported a third-quarter loss of $3.71 million, including a writeoff of $2.2 million to "oet realizable value" on 23-channel radios. Johnson reported a third-quarter loss of about $250,000 after a tax credit. lo a telephone interview Richard E. Horner, Johnsoo's president, said this week, he "bonestly didn't know" if the company would have inventory writeoffs in the fourth quarter, but be added that the cost of the inventory of 23-channel sets was below present selling value.

He. would not comment on Wall Street speculation over the fourth-quar-ter result, including the estimate of at least one analyst that the quarter will sbow a loss.

Despite the uncertainty, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fencer & Smith Inc. is still recommending the stock, which the brokerage firm called a "preferred vebicle" for citizens' band radio in April, when the shares were trading

Currently, Merrill rates Johnson a "high-risk cyclical growth" stock that can be bought for appreciation on an intermediate-term basis and oo a long-term basis. The firm terms Johnson "O.K. to buy."

The brokerage house estimates that Johnson will earn $4.80 to $5 a share for all of 1977 and $2.10 for 1976, up from $2.36 in 1975.

In Merrill's current computerized recommandation available to customers at branch offices, the firm says the stock is "very attractive" based on a target price-earnings ratio of 10.

Robert Krauser who analyzes the stock for a small member firm, Rosen-krantz, Ehrenkrantz, Lyoo & Ross Inc., believes that Johnson probably lost money in the fourth quarter and is predicting the company will earn no more than $1.50 a share in 1977. Mr. Krausar is short 1,000 shares of Johnsoo stock.

In the telephone interview with Mr. Horner, be said the company could earn $1 a share quarterly in 1977 as Merrill expects, but added:

"I don't see any reason why we can't. but that's oot a positioo of the management and I wouldn't want to have to defend it."

Perhaps the strongest statement of the many statements against the procosala at yesterday'a meeting was made by Ed-ward E. Moritt—a registered trader who said he represented at least 500 of the

The proposals to increase the oumber of memberships—approximately 200 new members could be accommodated in the exchange's physical facilities and another 200 members rarely are seen on the floor —have resulted in a noticeable selloff in seat prices in recent days. Last Thurs-day, the day the committee report was made public, a seat sold for $56,000. Yes-terday one sold for as low as $40,000. The all-time high was set in 1968 and 1969 at $515,000. in seat prices in recent days. Last Thurs-day, the day the committee report was made public, a seat sold for $56,000. Yesterday's tradiog activity in seat sales, moreover, indicated how the value of a Big Board seat was affected by the access committee report and the ensuing their barometer." What Mr. Moritt was asserting was that third-market dealers and regional ex-changes use the Big Board tape as a changes use the Big Board tape as a al investors, on the other. Analysts' inquiries usually delve into the future for plans of new products or plant ex-pansion. By contrast, individuals often pursua personal concerns, such as the next dividend increase. Among securities analysts, the strongest demand is for companies to disclose more data on their individual lines of business. The analysts also show keen interest in quarterly reports and indeed would prefer them almost as detailed as annual financial statements. No consensus exists concerning financial forecasts, Some analysts would have companies publish them, especially for the coming quarter, while others are content to make their own projections.

The disclosure study concerning im-proper corporate payments is being prepared for discussion at the advisory

A. Griffin of Stanford University. Professor Griffin is relying on statis-tical techniques to isolate tha disclo-sure's impact from other stock-market fluctuations. He compared the stocks? performance after the disclosures with their trading patterns in past years and also with those of similar companies that had not disclosed anything improper.

In a telephone interview, Professor Griffin characterized the impact as "non-trivial but small." His findings were merely "suggestive," he cau-tioned, but companies among the first to make disclosures seemed more affected than those in later waves.

Analysts Fewer, Busier Companies face tough competition for the attention of an influential audience-the securities analysts, whose recommendations at times have a powerful impact on how a company's stock fares. According to the Opinion Research Corporation, Wall Street is deploying many fewer analysts now than several years ago. They are relatively inex-perienced and apparently spread thin. A typical analyst is burdened with fol-lowing 35 to 40 companies scattered across four or five industries, a recent Opinion Research survey found. Opinion Research survey found.

More than one-third of 936 analysts interviewed had followed their assigned industries for two years or less. Among analysis for institutional investors, only one-fifth had more than five years' experience with an industry.

Opinion Research concluded that the leading comparies of each industry dominate analysts' attention. The average company is followed by only four enalysts in 10 who are specialists in that industry, asked for information by I in 3, and evaluated by I in 4.

The Rockwell International Corporation realized e 14 percent increase in net income for its fourth fiscal quarter, ended Sept. 30, reflecting higher sales and im-proved results from four of its five operations.

The report said that the aerospace op-erations had lower earnings because of increased losses in business aircraft and said claims paid out on the defaulted loans jumped $4.2 million to $5.9 million even though no loans were written off

The bank also reported that payments of principal and interest in arrears at the end of the year totaled $134.4 million, compared to $115.5 million the year be-fore. Some $116.7 million of that is made up of loans in China and Cuba, which are technically classified as io arrears since the Communist takeovers in those nations.

Other nations identified as borrowers and behind in payments, are Zaire $8.7 million in arrears; Nigeria listed as $1.55 million behind; Mexico lagging $1.2 million and Thailand $2 million behind. The General Accounting Office, an arm of the Congress, had warned last year that by expanding lending without ex-panding income the bank had significanty increased the risk of incurring losses.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11-The Union Commerce Corporation, parent of a bil-lion-dollar Cleveland bank, disclosed in lion-dollar Cleveland bank, disclosed in a document made available today at the Securities and Exchange Commis-eion that it was conducting a special investigation into "certain transac-tions" that appeared to involve the international division of the Union Commerce Bank, Assuming that questionable foreign paymente are involved, this is believed to be the first such case disclosed by an American bank. The few other banks thet have admitted questionable payments made political contributions in the United States.

Meanwhile, Alcon Laboratories Inc. raised to $359,932 its estimate of questionable foreign payments and J. Ray McDermott & Company said its chair-man had distributed $4,800 in company cash to reimburse employees for political contributions.

McDermott also disclosed an Internal Revenue Service investigation into previously reported questionable payments.

Dennison-Xerox Suit

The Dennison Manufacturing Corporation has announced that it and the Xerox Corporation had settled a patent and antitrust lawsuit pending since 1967. Dennisoo said that Xerox would make a one-time payment of $2 million in the settlement and that the com-panies had agreed to enter into a cross-license agreement.

Lockheed Seeking

Later Deadline

The Lockheed Aircraft Corporation has disclosed that it will ask the Securities and Exchange Commission for an extension of the deadline under which its special directors committee investigating foreign payoffs must complete and turn over its report to the full board of directors. A spokesman for Lockheed acknowledged that the report would not be finished by today's deadline. He added that he had no idea "how much longer it will take."

Under a consect decree settling a lawsuit filed by the S.E.C. the report was supposed to have been given to directors by Aug. 11, However, Lockheed requested and was granted an initial 90-day extension of the deadline. Lockheed held a special sharehold-

Lockneed neid a special sharehold-ers meeting in September to ratify a restaucturing plan but the company cannot hold a regular annual meeting until the special committee's report is published and incorporated as part of the proxy material for the meeting.

Newport Dry Dock And Navy in Pact

The Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, a unit of Tenneco Inc., said the Navy had agreed not to press claims against, the shipyard for late or defective ship designs produced by the yard. In return, Newport News agreed to work with the Navy on drafting a con-tract to build a new nuclear-powered aircraft carrier that will cost about $2 billion. Both parties have also agreed to move forward with negotiations to resolve other problems over which they have differed.

Newport News, which has filed $894 million in contract claims egainst the Navy, had threatened to stop all work on Navy ships and not to bid on the aircraft carrier or other new work. The yard is said to be the only one in the nation capable of building nuclear-powered surface ships for the Navy.

New Marlboro Country

Philip Morris Inc. has signed an agreement with VVB Tabakindustrie of East Germany for the manufacture and marketing of Mariboro cigarettes in East Germany. Production is sched-uled in January.

Wyly Asks Vote To Reorganize

Shareholders of the Dallas-based Wyly Corporation have been asked by the company to vote for a reorganization of the company next month to avoid bankruptcy. 5am Wyly, the founder of the com-puter service concern, told stockholders in a letter that the company had lost $135 million in the last two and one-half years. He also submitted a re-organization plan that he said provided the only realistic opportunity for the company to avoid bankruptcy "and to maintain its compute, service operations, its only remaining business." The letter said the company, which ie undergoing a second recapitalization plan, did not expect to recover any of its investments in Datren, a subsidiary. which went into banking a substance which went into banking, which went into banking and was sold to the Southern Pacific Communi-cations Company for $4.9 million.

Goodyear Plans

Alabama Addition

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Com-pany said it would become the world's largest maker of radial auto tires with a $69 million addition to its plant in Gadsden, Ala.

The tire manufacturer said that the expansion, believed to be the rubber industry's largest, would enable it to overtake Micbelin of France in world-wide capacity. Already the largest ra-dial manufacturer in the United States, Goodyear makes radials in 11 domestic plants.

Goodyear said the expansion of the Gadsden plant would provide 500 new jobs, raising plant employment to near-ly 4,000 persons. The addition to the plant will be completed in about two vears.

Malaysia Simplifies Offshore Oil Terms

The Malaysian Government has simplified the terms it wants for offshore oil and natural gas production-sbaring agreements with units of the Royal Dutch-5hell group and the Exxon Corporation. Sources close to the negotia-tions in Kuala Lumpur said the move increased the likelihood of an agree-ment in principle before the govern-ment's previously reported deadline of next Mondau next Monday.

These sources say that Petronas, the Malaysian state mil company, is no longer insisting on a two-tiered formula for determining oil-compaoy costs. Previously, Petronas had insisted that exploration costs be treated separately from actual production costs and that exploration costs be reimbursed only for a limited time. Now, according to these sources, Petronas is prepared to agree to credit the producers with a single percentage to cover both exploration and production costs.

Advertising Sound Guard's TV Campaign Is Ready

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

Tooight, in the top 10 markets, the Ball Corporation will take to television to reach those coofirmed modern-music lovers and record collectors it has missed in print. The vehicle will be "Midnight Special," the rock music extravaganza on the NBC-TV natwork. Additiooal Ball commercials will run on the network's stations during "Saturday Night." And after Jan. 1 Ball will become a full oetwork advectiser on "Midnight Special."

The product is Sound Goard, which not only cleans records (which some 30 other products promise to do), but also protects them (Whiich, Ball says, no other product does).

Ball, perhaps best known for the items it sells for home canning, acquired the technology for Sound Guard through one of its divisions working oo the space program. When sprayed and buffed on a record, Sound Guard forms a thin dry lubricant coating. The benefits are ex-bibited in a demonstration commercial hibited in a demonstration commercial by N. W. Ayer ABH International. . .

W. Stanley Stuart Jr., vice president and general manager of Ball's consumer products divisioo, talked about the new product's introduction before and after an Association of National Advertisers New Product Marketing Workshop the other day. He was not without an interesting statistic or two: There are 74 million record-playing machines in American bomes, for instance, aod some 480 million records were sold for about $1.5 hillion in the United States last year. Oh, what wonderful opportunities that presents to Ball, Sound Guard sells for $6.99 (refills for $4.60) and each is good for coating 25 records. Before Ball took its new product to test market in Columbus and Syracuse a year ago, it believed that—since W. R. Simmons Associates data showed that women hought almost as many records as men—there would be a dual andience for Sound Guard. The test markets, however, showed that 80 to 85 percent of the purchases where made hy males. So now Ayer is slanting its media purchases toward men be-tweeo the ages of 18 and 3S.

Before going oational with the product, the company tried a direct market-ing program with long-copy Sound Guard ads running in such magazines as Stereo Review, High Fidelity and Audio. These ads resulted in the sale of almost 50,000 units in less than three months.

The audiophile magazines are still on

Commodity Price Index Increases 1.8 From the Week-Earlier Level

McCall Seeks CHC Stock

The McCall Publishing Company, the Pritzker family property that publishes McCall's magazine, is seeking to ac-quire a cootrolling interest in the CHC Corporation, a publishing com-

CHC issues Los Angeles and The American West magazines as well as sciaotific, medical and inspirational books, an insurance-law reference library and popular religious records and music

A.&P. Counts Its Blessings

A year ago in Washington, recalls Grant C. Gentry, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, he was introduced to President Ford, who asked, "Are you Price or Pride?" Mr. Gentry used the incident as an example of the effectiveness of Mc-Cano-Ericksoo's A.&P. corporate advertising program as he spoke at the en-nual meeting of the Televisioo Bureau of Advertising now being held in Washington.

More impressive was the disclosure that, despite the elimination of about a third of its stores, the A.&P. chain increased its sales 4 percent in the six months after the advertising effort began.

D.D.B. Shows a Profit

Doyle Dane Bernbach, which lost money in the third quarter of last year, had a profit of $55,000, or 3 cents a ahare, in this year's lbird quarter. Gross income increased 46.9 percent to $13 million.

Gross income in the first mine mooths of 1976 rose 22 percent to 193.5 percent to $2.9 million, or $1.57 a share, compared with the year-earlier 54 cents a share.

Burger King's Theme

The J. Walter Thompson Company's first advertising for Burger King will run Sunday on all three TV networks and in 50 spot markets. The new theme is: "America loves burgers at America's Burger King." E. C. Schoeo-lah group triad president of marketing leb, group vice president of marketing, insists that this is "an imaginative variation of our 'Have it your way" theme."

share of the solid air-freshener market with its Twins brand, will be looking for further increases with the helps of Stick Ups. This entry is intended to be used in new areas and is intended to appeal to the one housewife out of six who doesn't use such products, believing that a visible air freshener is a confession of odors in the home.

The new product, ahaped like a hockey puck, sells at two for 89 cents. It is equipped with an ad-hesive strip for sticking in any concealed (or nonconcealed) area of the home or car. The name, Stick Ups, came from the imagioa-tions of Neil Drossman and Frank Fristachi at Airwick's agency: Della Femina, Travisano & Partners. Most of the $4 million budget will be going into television. Two 30-second and three 10-second commercials will promote the product's area of poteotial use --a Bil Baird puppet popping out of a garbage can, an arm comiog out of a toilet tank and George Raft in a jail cell. All will be saying "This is a good place for a Stick Up." The advertising will begin in January in markets accounting for, 25 percent of this country's population. From them Stick Up will begin their national rollout. The introductory markets are New York, Milwaukee, Chicago, Phila-delphia, Dallas and Los Angeles, But, fellows, the Big Apple smells good already.

Sales Volume Has Soared

Dr. Dertouzos is encouraged by the fact that Digital's annual sales volume, approaching $1 hillion, is four times what it was in 197J-72, and Data General's sales of $160 million in the ver ended Sept. 30 were more than five times those of 1971-72. Kenneth Olsen, president of Digital, which is expanding rapidly in Arizona, Colorado, Vermont, New Hampshireand possibly Maine, where Data Gener-al already has a plant—still said in an interview that he believed the Boston area is preferable for starting a small, high-technology company. Talent in universities and large companies is abundant, he noted.

One small enterprise in the Boston area. Extrion in Gloucester, already has won respect in the semiconductor industry for its widely used implantation equipment. It is competing with a Cali-fornia company, Etec of Hayward, in manufacturing new electron-beam ma-chines for semiconductor mask-making. It is doing this, however, with support from Varian Associates of Paln Alto, Calif., at the north end of Silicon Val-ley, which purchased Extrion last year.

ship created by A.M.D.'s president, W. J. (Jerry) Sanders, that company pro-duces more than 400 microelectronic parts and is aiming at a reputation for superior reliability---both for those introduced by other companies for which A.M.D. is a "second source," and for an increasing number of its own proprietary devices.

All these companies use stock owner ship heavily to attract employees, and they stress informality in hours and dress—all the while seeking to outrun their competition hy achieving a com-manding positinn on the next round of technology. A.M.D., inr example, brashly hills itself as "the next giant" in colorful ad-vertising that eppears in Electronic News, the weekly trade newspaper. A level of $100 million sales, which A.M.D. expects to approach in two years, is expected to be the minimum for survival as an across-the-board integrated-circuit manufacturer. Such companies are facing increasing pressure to integrate upward toward devices used hy the general public, such as increasingly complex television games, or highly specialized instru-ments where users can be charged premium prices.

Hewlett-Packard a Pacesetter

One such firm with a dominant posi-tion in this area is the Hewlett-Packard Company, with about $1 billion in sales and 32,500 employees worldwide, 10,000 of them in California. According to John Doyle, the English-horn vice president for personnel of Hewlett-Packard, the chief criteria for lectronics-plant location are the things that prospective employees want. Those are, he said, "a nice place to live, near a reasonable source of con-

J40 engineering courses are transmit-ted to a total of 2,200 off-campus regis-trants, who use one of 125 television-equipped rooms at 35 off-campus sites. Half the courses, he said, also are taped. Following an experiment at Hewlett-Packard's Santa Rnsa, Calif., plant. the Stanford system is heginning to shift into taped lectures exhibited to small groups of students hy a qualified tutor. According to Dr. James Gibbons of Stanford, the tutored students do even better on examinations than their highly motivated off-campus colleagues taking the course on live television.

Influence is Widespread The influence on advanced electronic companies here, exercised most strongly through Dr. Frederick Terman, who is now retired, has extended far beyond television courses. Dr. Terman is credit-ed with a key role in the founding of both Hewlett-Packard and Varian Associates.

The university has been able to pro-vide land in its industrial park, and latitude in continuing the teaching assignments of professors whose small companies were struggling to be profitable. The electrical engineering department can offer the cooperation of its full-dress integrated circuit laho-ratory with a hudget of $1.5 million a year. The local attitude toward formation of new companies to join the ranks of Ampex and other large local electronic enterprises is more positive than elsewhere, according to Hewlett-Packard's Mr. Doyle. He said he suspected that as many advanced-technology companies had been formed and had survived around Palo Alto in the last 20 years as in all of Britain and West Germany.

William Hambrecht of the San Francisco venture capital and investment firm of Hambrecht and Ouist said that the success of semiconductor engineers in hammering down the cost of electronic components 10-fold in the last six years alone had stimulated rapid formation and growth of high-technology companies here. "Cost is the key to why so much is happening right here in Sillcon Gulch," Mr. Hamhrecht said.

Students' Army Training Corps, Naval Section, at the Stevens Institute, Calder led a vagabond life from 1919 to 1921, working in a wide variety of technical capacities, none of which engaged him very closely. In 1922, he worked in the boiler room of a passenger sbip that plied between New York and San Francisco via the Panama Canal.

Studied Painting

From the fall of 1923 until 1926 he followed what by then had manifested itself as an imperious bent and studied painting at the Art Students League in New York, where his teachers included John Sloan, George Luks, Guy Pene du Bois, Thomas Hart Benton and Kenneth Hayes Miller. Like many a distinguished American artist at that time, he found parttime work as a commercial artist. In particular, he was a sports illustrator for the National Police Gazette. With the belp of his Gazette pass, he developed his lifelong interest in the circus, and in 1925 be produced his first wire sculp-ture, a sundial in the form of a rooster on a vertical rod.

on a vertical rod. In 1926 Calder made a large number of drawings from animals in the Bronx and Central Park zoos. These formed the subject of his first book, "Animal Sketch-ing." In the same crucial year, he had his first show of oil paintings at the Artists' Gallery on East 61st Street and sailed for Europe as a day laborer on a British freighter. Once in Paris, he soon established himself as an unusual and strikinger vigorus character. strikingly vigorous character.

Living in a tiny room on the Rue Daguerre, he made his first movable wood and wire animals, exhibited a bird made of bread and wire at the Salon des Indeand though he still considered himself a painter, it quickly became clear that his main contribution was to be as a sculptor of an original and distinctive kind.

We've been great friends ever since, though our work was very different. He was so wonderfully innovative. The field bordered a public highway and by a loud hlowing of horns we became aware that we had stopped traffic and people were caught up in this fantastic world of trees and mead-ow and yellow flowers and Sandy and mobiles and dancers. Taste impact of 'Enriched Flavor' breakthrough reshaping smoker attitudes.

Until today, low tar meant low taste. And smokers knew it. Eight out of ten smokers had tried "low tars" and were disappointed.

Now one low tar cigarette has changed all that.

MERIT. Only 9 mg. tar. Yet with extraordinary taste.

Taste made possible by a breakthrough in tobacco technology called the 'Enriched Flavor' process.

By isolating certain "key" flavor-rich tobacco ingredients in cigarette smoke, MERIT researchers have developed a way to pack extra flavor into tobacco without

Thousands of smokers were tested. The majority reported that even if the cigarette tested had up to 60% more tar than MERIT, MERIT delivered as much-or more-taste.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough.

Now smoke the cigarette.
